NATIONAL EGG MARKET - AT A GLANCE

Prices were unchanged throughout the country. The market tone was mostly steady to instances fully steady. Retail demand ranged light to moderate, mostly moderate, with promotional activity usually generating best pull. Supplies were mixed, balanced to available at times, but generally adequate overall. However, on the West coast, fairly good movement, enhanced by regional feature activity, kept product in good balance. Breaking stock supplies were at least adequate from regular sources, and demand for additional product continued unaggressive as dealers monitored market developments closely. Light type fowl were fully sufficient for immediate needs.

MARCH 08, 2000

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds remained sufficient to keep 3 pound and heavier weights in good balance to well cleared. However, overall inquiry was slowing, typical of both normal midweek activity and the beginning of lent. Live supplies were mostly moderate; weights were mostly desirable to light. Processing schedules were moderate to moderately heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were 1 cent higher at 49 to 61 cents. Trade sentiment was fully steady to firm. Breast items and wings continued to clear well. Leg items were ample for the light and spotty buying interest.

National Grain Market

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News
Daily National Grain Market Summary

Grain and soybean bids climbed higher, Wednesday. Export optimism, fund buying on the Boards, and some positioning ahead of Friday's USDA reports were all factors. Wheat steady to 2 cents higher. Corn 1 to 3 cents higher. Sorghum 9 cents higher. Soybeans 4 to 7 cents higher. Fair overnight wheat sale and USDA opened a tender last night for 11 million bushels of hard red winter wheat expected to be donated to Russia. Recent rainfall was beneficial and some areas showed improvment in crop conditions but other areas remain dry. Corn and soybean bids were up moderately higher. Export sales of corn is expected tomorrow with estimates of 42 million bushels. High fuel costs have begun to worry farmers and may affect the amount of acreage to be planted. Soybean bids were supported by improved meal demand and delayed harvest in Brazil due to rains. Export demand continued slow for beans this week.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

PURE MONDAY, MARCH 13.

ERIN GO BRAGH

If you're celebrating National Day in Ireland (St. Patrick's Day to Americans, March 17), then you'll greet your friends with "Erin Go Bragh," or Ireland Forever! Forget the green beer and make up a batch of Irish soda bread, with baking soda and buttermilk instead of yeast It's good with coffee, Irish or plain, and can be enjoyed warm or cold In America, we think that green is the color for St. Patrick's Day, but many of us forget that the Irish national flag (adopted in 1922) contains two other colors as well The green is for the Roman Catholics, the orange is for the Protestants, and the white in the middle is to symbolize the desire for peace between the two Nothing dies so hard, or rallies so often, as intolerance.

–Henry Ward Beecher

TIP OF THE WEEK

IRISH SODA BREAD

4 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 cup sugar
2 cups raisins or currents
1/4 cup butter, softened
1-3/4 cups buttermilk
1 egg

Combine dry ingredients by sifting, then add raisins Cut softened butter into dry ingredients Whisk the buttermilk and egg together, then add it to the flour mixture Knead briefly on floured surface just until smooth, about 2 minutes Grease two pie pans, divide dough in half, and press into two round, flattened loaves Cut crosses into the top of each and bake at 350°F for 40 minutes, or until done

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

In March, many weathers rained and blowed, but March grass never did good.

When March is like April, April will be like March.

St. Joseph's Day (Mar. 19) clear, so follows a good year.

OPINION

4-H, A Great Asset

Pennsylvania celebrates 4-H Awareness Week from March 12 to 18. Young people between the ages of 8 and 19 develop leadership, citizenship, interpersonal, and workforce skills in a wide variety of 4-H programs. These programs fall within four major academic disciplines: bological sciences, social sciences, arts, and humanities, and physical sciences.

The 4-H program across the nation runs on "To make the best better". And so they do. More than 6,512,600 youth are involved in pledging their heads to clearer thinking, their hearts to greater loyalty, their hands to larger service, and their health to better living.

Because of the large number of minority youth and youth that live in cities, 4-H has become a unique opportunity for extension, the 4-H clubs, and their volunteer leaders to acquaint the future generation with the positive story of agriculture. Only 11 percent of 4-Hers live on farms, but the Philadelphia Cooperative Extension of the Pennsylvania State University also subscribes to Lancaster Farming. As this only one example of city involvement in 4-H, we are sure this helps to bridge the gap between farm and city.

In all, 625,486 volunteer leaders worked directly or indirectly with youth. The average 4-H volunteer spends approximately 220 hours per year with 4-H, and drives an average of 300 to 400 miles in a personally owned car. With an average of $50 personal money spent in service as a volunteer, this contribution to the program amounts to approximately $1.9 billion per year. Private sector partners invest almost $100 million annually through local, state, and national 4-H youth development programs.

All this to say that the organization founded in 1902 has grown to include the wide-range of interests of today's young people. The agriculture heritage is still alive and well. But today's 4-Hers also design web pages, participate in mock legislature, organize community clean up, and deliver speeches. What a wonderful asset 4-H is to American society. Keep up the good work.

Editor:

The article about dairy farms, Get Bigger-Better-Or Out, wasn't worth printing. Us farmers are big enough and good enough to supply the demand so why get out. To get bigger or better could mean no time for church on Sundays. And I don't believe this surplus milk talk.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Avoid Soil Compaction

According to Dr. Doug Beegle, Penn State Extension Soil Scientist, when a soil is compacted by a heavy load, such as a manure spreader, the structure of the soil is destroyed. The compaction decreases the amount of pore space in the soil. Adequate pore space is important for air, water and nutrient movement in the soil. It is also important for root growth. For example, a 10 percent reduction in pore space may result in a 4 times increase in root resistance, meaning the plant roots will not be able to penetrate the soil to receive water and nutrients needed for optimum growth.

To Avoid Soil Compaction When Applying Manure

During the past decade, many articles have been written emphasizing the importance of applying nutrients in amounts which match closely the nutrient needs of the crop being grown. Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, reminds us an area on manure application which has been forgotten and may have a negative effect on crop yields is the effect application equipment has on soil structure.

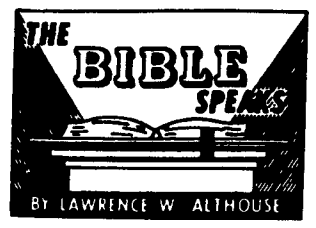
Anderson has observed soils seem much more compacted on dairy farms with manure storage than do dairy farms without storage. The major contributors to soil compaction are heavy loads like manure spreaders on wet soils. As manure storage becomes more popular, the period of time used to spread manure becomes shorter and the equipment gets bigger. The two most popular times to spread manure is fall and early spring. These are also times when soils are most often wet. Compaction may be minimized in several ways. Avoid driving heavy loads on wet soils Spread out the weight as much as possible with multiple axles and tires Use radial tires. Do not overload when soils are wet.

To Be Safe With Electricity

Chester Hughes, Lancaster County Extension Livestock Agent, reminds us that electrocutions rank among one of the top hazards that claim farm lives every year. The more obvious incidents include making repairs on electrical equipment without disconnecting the circuit or not locking out the circuit so someone may accidentally turn it back on while you are repairing the equipment. Also, unexpected contact with power lines claims victims. Raised truck beds, grain augers and raised tractor loaders can contact power lines with fatal results. Electrical safety tips on the farm include: Keep all farm wiring in good condition.

Disconnect circuits and label them before attempting repairs. Do not attempt electrical work beyond your abilities. Avoid contacting power lines with equipment such as grain augers, raised truck beds and tractor loaders.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Always use the word impossible with the greatest caution."



WISDOM WITHOUT POWER

March 12, 2000

Background Scripture:
1 Corinthians 2 through 3
Devotional Reading:
1 Corinthians 3:1-9

At the turn of the new year, century and millennium, there have been an unusual number of newspaper stories, magazine articles and television programs about Jesus Christ and the Christian faith. Of course, I have joined with others in welcoming this spurt of interest in the person and message of Jesus Christ.

Yet, among the things I read and saw on television, I found that, for all their interest, they never came close to the meaning of Jesus Christ. Often, he was treated as one more of history's celebrities in whom people then and now either believe or disbelieve. None, it appeared to me, explored what it means to follow him.

Believing in Jesus Christ is not enough–you can measure that with a public poll. Jesus did not ask for people to believe in him, but to, "Follow me." The writer of the Epistle of James says, "Even the demons believe and shudder" (Jas. 2:19). Of course James is using the word "believe" in the intellectual sense–to believe with the mind. There are hundreds of things that I believe with my mind, but do not necessarily believe with my being, my life. Faith is not simply a mental proposition to which we give mental assent, but a conviction that can transform us and our lives. So it is quite possible to believe in Jesus Christ, but not live as his disciple.

Demonstration of the Spirit

I am an avid reader and have loved books since I first began to read. Many authors and books have had a profound effect upon my life, especially the Bible itself. The wisdom of the spoken and printed word is awesome, but Christian discipleship is not based primarily upon twenty centuries of Christian wisdom, helpful as that wisdom may be. If I had never witnessed that wisdom incarnate in others, in what they are and do, if I had not experienced it in my own life, I would have neither the motivation nor power to be a follower of Jesus Christ. As Paul says to the Corinthians: "my speech and my message were not in plausible words of wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and power, that your faith might not rest in the wisdom of men but in the power of God" (1 Cor. 2:4,5).

The seductive danger of human wisdom is that it all too easily becomes a substitute for the power of God. Many people would rather argue about Christ than actually follow him. Human wisdom, wonderful as it is, is always a wide open door to human arrogance, for when we think we have been able to entrap the essence of God into our human words and formulations, we blaspheme the God revealed in Christ. Any encounter with the Lord ought to turn us in the direction of abject humility, not arrogant pride. How we believe and how we explain what we believe ought never to take the place of following Christ.

Words and Deeds

But, isn't it enough to 'believe' in Jesus Christ?, you may ask. My answer–yes it is, so long as the beliefs go beyond mere mental ideas and assent. Confessing Jesus Christ as Lord with your lips is only the beginning of discipleship, for we must also confess Christ with our lives. Words must not become more important than deeds. When Paul says, "And we impart this in words not taught by human wisdom but taught by the Spirit" (2:13), he is testifying once again to superiority of power over mere words. The Holy Spirit, the Spirit of God is the source of that power.

Paul is not putting down wisdom per se, nor am I. He is simply pointing out the limits of human wisdom and contrasting "the wisdom of this age" with the "secret and hidden wisdom of God," mediated not so much in ideas as in the power of the Spirit. Jesus both taught and demonstrated the need for repentance, the power of love, the imperative for forgiveness, the redeeming sacrifice of the cross, and the transforming force of the resurrection–all or most of these still regarded by the world as so much foolishness, so contrary to the wisdom of the world.

Yet it is the words of human wisdom without power that are the true foolishness.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

By Ken Bailey
Penn State University
March 3, 2000

-Government Buys Cheese

396,000 lbs process cheese entered the CCC

-Cheese production seasonally heavy

-1999 commercial disappearance up 3.1 percent

-USDA announces round II of the Dairy Options Pilot Program

The market received mixed information this week. On the one hand, process cheese entered the dairy price support program for the first time since July 1997 and cheese production is seasonally heavy. On the other hand, Grade AA butter prices were relatively strong ($0 97-$0 98 per pound) this week, and block cheese prices gained a penny a pound to $1.12. Also, USDA reported this week that demand for milk and dairy products in 1999 was relatively strong

January milk production in 2000 was up 4.7 percent in 20 major dairy states. Not surprisingly, so also was dairy product production. American-type cheese production in January was 312.7 million pounds, up 7.9 percent from a year ago. Mozzarella cheese production was 214.5 million pounds, up 5.3 percent. And, total cheese production was 680.3 million pounds, up 6.5 percent. Butter production was 140.6 million pounds, up 14.0 percent.

These are very strong rates of gain. Remember, these are estimates for January numbers; they will be revised next month when the real January numbers are released.

According to USDA, process cheese entered the dairy price support program for the first time since July 1997. For the week February 28- - March 31, the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) had net purchases of 15.0 million pounds of nonfortified nonfat dry milk from the West and Midwest, and 396,000 pounds of process cheese from the Midwest.

Under this program, the CCC stands ready to purchase unlimited quantities of dairy products at CCC purchase prices. These prices are linked to the manufacturing support price for milk at $9.80 per cwt at 3.5 percent milkfat. Currently, the CCC purchase prices are $0.65 per pound for bulk butter, $0.68 per pound for no. 1 print butter, $1.10 per pound for 40- and 60-pound block cheese, $1.07 per pound for 500-pound barrel cheese, $1.1525 per pound for no. 5 process American cheese, $1.1925 per pound for no. 2 process American cheese, and $1.01 per pound for nonfortified, $1.02 per pound for fortified, and $1.1675 for instant nonfat dry milk

USDA reported commercial disappearance for milk and dairy products for 1999. This represents a proxy for demand. The numbers are revealing in that they suggest a favorable demand picture.

Milk production in 1999 grew 3.3 percent and imports grew 3.4 percent. =

Beginning commercial stocks for January 1, 1999 were up 7.9 percent over a= year ago. Consumption for the year grew 3.1 percent on a butterfat basis (this includes commercial export sales). Ending commercial stocks were up 16.4 percent by December 31, 1999. Consumption for individual dairy products was mostly favorable: butter up 4.8 percent, American cheese up 7.4 percent, other

Lancaster County Dairyman Urges Senate Agriculture Committee To Back Extension of Dairy Price Support Program

ARDEN HILLS, Minn.–Lancaster County dairyman Gordon Hoover told the Senate Agriculture Committee at a recent hearing that Congress needs to extend the dairy price support program until the next farm bill is completed in 2002 to help dairy farmers who are currently coping with the lowest prices in a generation.

"I hope the Senate recognizes the importance of continuing some type of safety net for dairy farmers when we experience extremely low prices," said Hoover, who serves as secretary of the Land O'Lakes Board of Directors. "In our opinion, the dairy price support program is that safety net."

Unlike during the 1980s, when the price support was set at levels that encouraged excessive supply, the current support level ($9.90 per hundredweight) is not an excessive incentive spurring unneeded production, Hoover said. It simply represents a very modest investment by the government in preventing the complete collapse of domestic dairy prices.

In wide-ranging comments about the current state of the domestic dairy industry, Hoover testified on behalf of the National Milk Producers Federation at the first of two days of Senate hearings on dairy policy. Hoover is a Land O'Lakes representative on the NMPF board. Land O'Lakes is the nation's second-largest dairy cooperative.

In the last two months, farm-level dairy prices have dropped to the lowest level since 1978, leaving many producers reeling. Earlier this month, Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said the Clinton Administration would ask for a two-year extension of the dairy price support program.

Hoover said this is the number one goal for dairy farmers this year on Capitol Hill. It's a goal with broad support among cooperatives and farm organizations. Currently, the price support program is scheduled to end on Dec. 31, 2000.

Another important economic tool for dairy producers is the Dairy Export Incentive Program (DEIP), which helps the U.S. dairy industry compete in international markets with heavily subsidized exports from the European Union and other nations.

Hoover told the Senate panel that, given the apparent intent of other nations to maintain their dairy export subsidies, "Congress should reauthorize the DEIP program prior to its expiration in 2002 in order to help keep the U.S. competitive in world markets."

Another looming dairy issue with international implications is the possibility that U.S. cheesemaking standards could be changed to allow for the use of dry milk protein concentrate. If the Food and Drug Administration were to allow for the use of concentrated, dried forms of milk protein, cheap imports of the concentrate could displace domestically-produced milk, driving prices that American farmers receive even lower, according to Hoover.

"Milk production concentrate produced by heavily-subsidized foreign dairies could be exported to the U.S. for less than it costs to produce a similar product here. And that foreign milk supply would directly displace billions of pounds of U.S.-produced milk that is now used to produce cheese," Hoover said. "I hope this committee will monitor this issue very closely, and give thoughtful consideration to the economic calamity that would be produced by such a change in cheese standards."

Hoover also assessed the recent reforms of the Federal Milk Marketing Order program, which were implemented on Jan. 1 after two years of administrative and legislative review. He said that although a great deal of the focus during the reform process was on Class I differentials, "there are many other significant changes in the new system that will improve the system and make it more market-oriented."

Hoover also said that NMPF will be working this year to promote industry unity through the sponsorship of the Dairy Producer Conclave, a series of regional grassroots meetings co-sponsored by other national farm groups that also want to focus on policies of mutual concern to all U.S. dairy producers.

"After the regional sessions, our steering committee of national dairy leaders will consider the input we've received at the regional sessions, and attempt to build a consensus program of issues and policies for the future. We intend to complete this process by December 31st, and will be back to this committee, and to your colleagues on the House Agriculture Committee, with our ideas and plans. Dairy producers must try to resolve our regional differences first, and then attempt to reach consensus with the processing segment of our industry," Hoover said.

The Dairy Producer Conclave will address milk prices, but also a variety of other issues, such as trade, animal health, environment, and food safety, that have the potential to impact the economic environment for farmers.

Glickman Announces New Proposal For Organic Standards

WASHINGTON (USDA) — On Tuesday United States Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman announced a new proposal for uniform and consistent national standards for organic food.

"This is the most comprehensive and strongest organic standard in the world," said Glickman. "I believe that is exactly what American consumers and organic farmers want."

Essentially, the proposal offers a national definition for the term "organic." Currently, organic food is certified by various private and state organizations that each use their own standards for the term "organic."

"A single national organic standard, backed by consistent and accurate labeling, will greatly reduce consumer confusion," said Glickman. "Consumers will know what they are buying and organic farmers will know what is expected of them."

The proposal details the methods, practices, and substances that can be used in producing and handling organic crops and livestock, as well as processed products. It establishes clear labeling criteria and rules so that consumers know exactly what they are buying when they purchase organic food. It specifically prohibits the use of genetic engineering, sewage sludge, and irradiation in the production of food products labeled "organic."

The proposal also prohibits antibiotics in organic livestock production and requires 100 percent organic feed for organic livestock. USDA's proposal will allow organic farmers to more easily export their products because trading partners can more easily deal with one national standard rather than multiple state and private standards.

The revised proposal is the result of careful analysis of more than 275,000 comments USDA received in response to its initial December 1997 organic proposal.

"We listened to consumers and organic farmers and closely followed the recommendations of the National Organic Standards Board to develop a national organic standard that is better than our original proposal," Glickman said. "We believe these new standards fully meet consumer expectations and reflect current organic farming practices."

Secretary Glickman also announced several other steps the Administration is taking to promote organic agriculture. President Clinton's fiscal 2001 budget proposes five million dollars for research to develop improved organic production and processing methods, evaluate economic benefits to farmers, and develop new organic markets.

Glickman said USDA will establish a pilot organic crop insurance program to help organic farmers better manage risk. He also announced that USDA and the University of California at Davis will conduct research on organic production and ways to enhance farmers' ability to market organic fruits and vegetables.

The proposed national standard and additional steps Secretary Glickman announced this week will help stimulate one of the fastest growing sectors of American agriculture. USDA estimates that the value of retail sales of organic foods in 1999 was approximately $6 billion.

The number of organic farmers is increasing about 12 percent per year and now stands at about 12,200 nationwide, most of them small-scale producers.

Fact sheets and other background materials on the proposed organic rule can be accessed on the web at www.ams.usda.gov/nop.

genic anvian virus in turkeys when it suddenly switched to high levels. The pathogenic quickly spread into layer, ostrich, guinea fowl, and quail, requiring more than 10 million birds to be depopulated.

In retrospect, the same factors were evident in Pennsylvania during the 1983 and 1986 epidemics and in the 1997-98 problems. Left unchallenged in the 1983 and 1986, the avian influenza outbreaks forced massive eradication of flocks.

"We can't allow this virus to establish itself. Once AI is introduced, it's impossible to keep it from spreading. We must prevent the start of it," Kradel said.

Kradel said the live bird market appears to be the primary source of contamination. The virus circulates among markets and suppliers, at times, take it to the market.

Although lots of efforts to reduce risks have been instilled, the bottom line is that despite all efforts there is not a significant reduction non-pathogenians in live bird markets in New York City, which makes it a risk to commercial operations.

Relative humidity has a profound effect upon ammonia levels, and for this reason, sensors should be used to keep the humidity properly adjusted. Once ammonia levels rise, it is almost impossible to have them drop to acceptable levels.

Broiler Challenges

Broiler production challenges were addressed by Tom Pantano, Tyson Foods, Andy Bradford, Wenger Feeds, and Rusty Barnes, General Chemical Corporation.

Hot weather can cause havoc in broiler houses. Pantano said that large birds cannot cope well with hot, humid weather. Although some losses will happen regardless of what you do, losses can be kept to a minimun.

Birds raised from the beginning in hot weather do not have as much difficulting acclimated to temperature swings.

Studies show that 85-90-degree temperatures cause broilers to become uncomfortable and panic. They will drink more water. Trouble is inevitable at 95-100 degree temperature, and at 100 degrees, broilers die rapidly.

Highest mortality rates happen between 5 p.m. and 7 p.m.

Debate is ongoing on whether or not witholding feed restricts the losses. Some producers adamantly insist that it works if the feeders are kept out of reach from 6 a.m. until 8 p.m.

Poultry Progress

On a scale of 1-10, with one being the lowest, Kradel would classify the virus danger at a 3 or 4.

"We can't predict if it (an outbreak) will happen next week or months later, but the possibility is there," Kradel warned.

He recommends strict biosecurity at the farm level to prevent exposure. "Manure the size of a dime (containing AI) can infect a million chickens," Kradel said.

Another AI-related problem with which to contend is public perception. In 1997 the first proven connection between poultry and human viruses were proven in Hong Kong. Although there doesn't seem to be a connection between AI and human health, Kradel warned that people are liable to accuse even if it isn't valid.

Kradel said that in perusing literature he found evidence that AI was a problem in the U.S. during 1924-1929, when it was referred to as fowl play. In the historical accounts, the New York markets were also confirmed as the source of contamination.

Kradel believes that once the virus is introduced to a flock, it can spread by air and through manure.

It appears that three to four weeks after a virus spreads through a flock, it can no longer be detected in the flock or in the manure after two weeks.

"It seems to die quickly, but we can't count on that," Kradel said of cleanup efforts.

New Developments

Dr. Paul Patterson, Penn State, shared new industry products displayed at the industry's national convention in Atlanta. Of special interest to producers is the continual development of better products to control ammonia in poulty litter.

"Severe litter problems can cost $600 per flock," Patterson of the need for a better solution.

Three new products tackle the ammonia problem from different angles. Not one product is perfect by itself but each has features that work better for specific incidents.

Producers should talk with their service representatives to decide if one of the products are a viable solution in their bird houses.

New gadgets released include an electronic hand and arm wash system that sanitizes boots at the same time.

Some of the new items Patterson thought worthy of review were an egg pasteurizer to be used in food service settings, a claw heat treatment to reduce turkey carcass damage, an infrared beak trim, fowl mite product, a broiler approved vaccine spray, and infrared laser thermometer.

Introduced also were new ways to market poultry and eggs. Two internet companies show how they are marketing to food service, manufacturing, and retail markets.

"I think this is where we're going," said Patterson of internet marketing.

Ventilation Tips

"Provide proper environment, and you'll have better health," said Dr. Eileen Wheeler, Penn State.

Wheeler released study profiles of bird health comparing temperature variations and relative humidity. She recommends using hand-held thermometers at floor levels since temperatures can fluctuate drastically between floor and standing height.

ess Day Helps A Better Job

The more water birds drink, the more it helps to lower internal temperature.

"A two-degree drop may make the difference between life and death," Pantano said. However, it is important to keep water temperatures between 50-60-degrees. Birds drink less water if the water temperature rises above these levels and, at 110-degrees, will refuse to drink any water.

It also seems to help reduce bird fatalities if the broilers are walked. They have a tendency to sit still, and this traps more heat beneath them, causing internal temperatures to rise. A producer walking through the house will encourage the birds to move around.

It is important to be prepared for hot weather before it happens rather than waiting until temperatures escalate.

"Tunnel ventilation is definitely the way to go," Patano said. But that in itself is not enough. He stressed the importance of having kick-in thermometers and alarm and generator backups. Shutters and fogging systems need to kept clean to allow the best possible air flow. Grass, weeds, and bushes can block airflow from entering the house. Be aware that electrical boxes can overheat and shut down.

Maintaining brooder temperatures reflects on feed conversion and yolk formation. Bradford said that yolk sac absorption is the main source for maternal antibodies to pass on an immune system to offspring.

Bradford cautioned producers to make sure that heat sources illuminate consistent heat. Although temperatures may be acceptable beneath pancake and radiant space heaters, chicks who leave to partake of food and water may walk away from the heat source and not return.

"Chicks are known not to be the smartest things in the world," Bradford said.

"Look and listen to brids for signs of uncomfortableness," Bradford said. Deafening chirps signal trouble. The chirps should sound soothening to the ear.

"If environmental requirements are not met in the first week, the potential the bird possesses will be lost, never to be recaptured," Bradford said.

Gains in genetics involved in rate gains have been so phenomental that Bradford jokingly told producers, "Soon we will be hatching a five-pound bird and we won't need you."

It wasn't that many years ago that it took 15 weeks to grow a seven-pound rooster. Today it takes only six weeks to produce a five-pound bird. This demands more attention to create a healtful environment for the rapidly growing birds, which are more susceptible to temperature stresses.

"Bird genetics cause more water to pass through a bird, which demands more managing of wet litter.

"You can do wonderful things in the house, but if you're not taking moisture out of the house, you are going to have problems," Barnes said.

Of the ideas given for managing wet litter, Barnes said some sound so, but often are not followed.

"Push it off, and it will cost you," Barnes said of repairs.

In particular is to relize how much "cake" forms from an occassional drip on a faulty pipe. If it isn't managed immediately, it become more expensive and time-consuming later on.

Houses, Barnes said, can be dried out under the coldest conditions when one gets an understanding of basic ventilation. Winter ventilation is just as important as summer.

"Get moisture out, not just moving around," Barnes said.

Every 20-degrees rise in air temperature doubles the water capacity holding of air.

"Too many producers don't want to run fans in order to save fuel. That's wrong. You got to get moisture out or you'll just hurt yourself.

"Wet litter management is more than aesthetics. It impacts bird health, bird performance, and bird stress," Barnes said.

Pat Wood speaks with Jim Shirk about the importance of good public relationships. In her presentation, Wood said, "The future of agriculture is at stake because of public misunderstanding."

Public Relations

The importance of good public relations between producers and consumers continues to grow. Pat Wood, a public consultant for PennAg, detailed consequences to the "do nothing approach" to public's wrong perceptions.

Bad headlines, community problems, additional expense and hassles, additional laws and regulations, and moratoriums are some of the results.

"To communicate better, you need to know how others think," Wood said. People are distrustful of big business, they want environmental problems solved, and economical balances. They are fearful of any health risk associated with food. Consumers are fickle and quesy — they don't want to know where meat comes from.

Wood recommends a two-prong approach when dealing with the public. Communication should be based on substance, not hype, and a broad-based overall stradegy to lay the foundation.

"The primary message should be 'we feed your family, we feed the nation, and we feed the world,'" she said

Appeal to the truth: the ag industry is tightly regulated, especially in Pennsylvania. Advanced farms rely on traditional family farms as part of modern models, and are not putting small farms out of business.

The truth includes the following:

- Modern farms enable food to be produced safer and cheaper.
- Land stewardship is a priority.
- Industry uses the best practices.
- Industry is interested in public concerns.
- Farming is a vital contributor to the economy, and the trend toward the modern farm is inevitable.

To reduce problems when attempting to expand the farm, Wood recommends planning before applying for a permit and establishing good rapport with neighbors and local authorities.

Because the media influences public opinion, farmers should get good at media relationships.

"You're doing things right — share what you're doing," Wood said.

The future of agriculture is at stake because of public misunderstanding. Farming techniques should not be required to stand still when other businesses are allowed to grow.

Other topics addressed at the event sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Lancaster County Poultry Association included an infectious bronchities update by Dr. Andre Ziegler, University of Pennsylvania, and an explanation on how the egg is formed by Patterson.

PARKSBURG (Chester Co.) - Comradery, beautiful cows, contrasting management styles and operational goals, and did I mention comradery?

This summary gives both the subjective and objective sides of the Chester County Holstein tour Tuesday. We left the Samuel Stoltzfus farm at about 8:10 a.m., a little late because the bus motor spewed antifreeze water all over the farm driveway and the driver couldn't decide if it was serious or what. But finally bus officials concluded it was only an over-fill of water and nothing serious. And we had no further trouble with the bus the rest of the day, so they were right.

First stop was at the Horace Hiendel Farm in York County where the huge new dairy complex houses 200 cows in a tie-stall barn that gives the impression when you walk in that you have cows as far as the eye can see. Fancy Brown Swiss cows line both sides of the barn as you enter. They also have a few Jerseys, but mostly Registered Holsteins that include Bellwood, Formation Celcius, and Patron. An evaporating cooling system helps maintain cow comfort and their 25,700lb. herd average.

Of special interest was the new farm store and small processing plant where they will open next week to sell locally the milk from the Brown Swiss cows. The tour made an extra stop just to see the nearly completed retail operation. In addition, Hiendel Farm feeds out 1,000 steers per year.

Five-year-old Jason Cooper helps his parents, Scott and April Cooper, show the tour group their Excellent Mena cow. Mena is milking as an 11-year-old, after starting at 1-11y. She has a total of seven finished lactations to 34,061m 1,208f 1,047p.

At the Edwin Johnson farm at Airville, they have six cow families that have top production and type. Under their Hickorymea prefix they have been breeding polled Holsteins for more than 30 years. Of special interest on the brochure of the farm is Hickorymea Leader GYP P 2E with a lifetime of 122,480m 4486f 3997p. Nine polled bulls are currently or soon will be available from U.S. studs from Hickorymea cow families. This down-to-earth farm herd is noted for beautiful uddered cows.

At Scott and April Cooper's farm they milk 73 cows that average 3x 28,850m 1,022f 917p. The farm of 120 acres was purchased in 1967 by Scott's parents. In December 1998 Scott and April purchased the farm. After developing groups of registered Holsteins from My Lady's Manor, Fultonway, and Pep-L-Lea, the current herd has 31 cows over 30,000m with 11 cows over 40,000m. Eleven cows have lifetime milk totals of 100,000 and 5 are over 200,000m lifetime. Classification is BAA 105.7 with 1 EX and 28VG. They have received the Holstein Association's PBR award for the last 7 years. Their prefix is Appealing Holsteins.

My Lady Manor Farm, home of many well-known Maryland State and National show winners was the next stop. Beautiful 94 point cows along with grand champion younger cows, made an especially impressive stop for the Chester County breeders. Housed in a freestall environment these cows look wonderful even in their work clothes.

The first animal to greet the tour group (of course he was in a strong enclosure) was the huge Lady's Manor Sascha bull who is currently leased by ABS and housed at My Lady's Manor. Sascha is out of Lady's Manor AB Star Sara EX92, and Aeros-

Final stop was Frey Dairy Farm, Conestoga, where the .000 cow dairy herd is expanding to 1,500 and kept in the most nodern of facilities. Here the ɔipeline takes the milk from the :ows directly onto the bulk tank ruck. And all the necessary nilking parlor, cooling, cow novement lanes, and freestall nousing facilities are in place to get the job done.

A water flush system is in place to handle the manure, including an irrigation system to get it to the fields. Automatic sort gates direct the cows to the proper housing or treatment areas. All fresh and treated cows are housed in the old complex. While Turkey Hill Dairies had original ties, they are no longer a part of the Frey Dairy Farm operation.

Along on the tour were the following people: Victor Stoltzfus, Steven Dietrich, Robert Manson, Donald Kauffman, Joel Kauffman, Richard Hostetter, Delmar Sensenig, Heidi Benner, Herb Benner, Jeanette Brooks, Jane Pepple, Roland Moore, Calvin Blank, Howard Robinson, Charles Mooer, Stan Buest, Brad Guest, Dan Gard, Neal King, Amos Stoltzfus, Hannah Stoltzfus, Abram Stoltzfus, Jim Longenecker, Ed Brackbill, Devon Brackbill, Samuel Stoltzfus, Ray Stoltzfus, Nolan King. Also, Wes Bontrager, Erica Lloyd, Christy Guest, Scott Umble, Ken Umble, Pat Harrison, Tom Stephens, Mark Stoltzfus, James Miller, Kenneth Shiever, Everett Newswanger.

To end a most enjoyable day, Monsanto hosted the group to dinner at Good and Plenty Restaurant along Route 896 on the way back home. It would be hard to find anyone on the tour that didn't have a good time. Including this writer.

Crop Storage Institute Sponsors Meeting

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — Farmers, extension agents, and industry professionals met in Middletown on Thursday to discuss "Profitable Storage For Your Farm." The Crop Storage Institute sponsored the meeting and provided lunch for all attendees.

The featured speaker was Tobina Schmidt, a graduate student from Kansas State University, which is internationally renown for its silage research. Schmidt discussed "the good, bad, and the ugly" about the various silage storage systems.

For upright silos, Tobina highlighted the good aspects, which included less than eight percent spoilage and low land requirement. The bad aspects included slow filling time, high initial costs, and slow unloading time. Effluent burns and dangerous fumes were the ugly aspects of upright silos.

Speakers at Thursday's Profitable Feed Storage For Your Farm meeting included (from left) Jason VanGilder, a Somerset Co. dairy farmer; Drew Freeman, from the Crop Storage Institute; and Tobina Schmidt, graduate student from Kansas State University.

The good aspects of silage bags included low cost, temporary nature, variable site storage, and less than 15 percent spoilage in good situations. Annual costs, plastic tears, plastic disposal, and contractor dependability were listed as the bad aspects of the bags. Poor packing density, mold, air infiltration, and spoilage as high as 50 percent were listed as the "ugly."

Good aspects of horizontal silos, such as trenches and bunkers, were low initial costs, high volume, and fast unloading time. The bad aspects of horizontal silos included silo contamination, side spoilage, effluent run-off, large exposed surface, and crucial packing density. The ugly aspect is that it must be covered.

Schmidt also reviewed a study comparing animals fed normal silage and animals fed a mixture of normal silage and spoiled silage. The Kansas State study showed that dry matter intake significantly decreases with greater percentages of spoiled silage in the ration.

"We recommend that people put top spoilage in a pile and do not feed it," said Schmidt.

Schmidt said, while many farmers think the only part of silage that is spoiled is the visible layer of spoilage, there is an additional layer of silage that has turned acidic.

"If there is seven inches of visible spoilage, there is more than likely another 15 inches that has turned acidic," said Schmidt.

Schmidt encouraged farmers to log on to Kansas State's new web site, www.oznet.ksu.edu/silage. The web site is filled with information and research regarding proper silage storage.

Schmidt also highlighted Kansas State's new list serve, Silage-L, which has 245 members, including farmers, industry people, and University researchers. Farmers can ask questions about their silage harvesting and storage methods through the list serve. The service is free from Kansas State. To sign up for the list serve, email listserv@ksu.edu and type in the body of your email, Sub Silage-L and your name.

Jason VanGilder, who farms with his father, uncle, and brother on DoVan Farms in Somerset County, spoke about his new 132 feet by 30 feet concrete silo. DoVan Farms has the largest vertical storage system in North America. They milk 250 cows and use a TMR mixer truck to feed their cows.

The new silo is built with a drive through feeding system underneath of it. Conveyors from other silos also go into the feeding room.

According to VanGilder, they can unload a 18-foot box wagon into the new silo in 10 minutes. They can unload a ton a minute from the silo into the mixer truck.

"When we looked at the economics of building the new silo, we looked past the initial cost and at long-term cost for the silo," said VanGilder.

"We have significantly less spoilage with the upright silo than we would have with a bunker silo. With the new equipment and silo, we can fill and unload the silo as quickly as we could a bunker. And we have less labor invested."

Drew Freeman from the Crop Storage Institute concluded the meeting with a discussion on vertical storage systems and a comparison of bunker storage systems.

"For decades, tower silos were the only way to feed silage," said Freeman. "But then the industry switched to horizontal silos because of greater speed in filling and feeding time."

"The industry has reacted to farmers' desire for speed and efficiency, making the silos bigger and equipment better," said Freeman.

When most farmers expand, they look at the initial cost of investment when they determine what feed storage system to use. When looking at initial costs, the horizontal silos are the lower costing systems, comparing a 5,000-ton vertical storage system at $160,000 and a 5,000-ton horizontal storage system at $85,900.

However, according to Freeman, a farmer should consider the additional labor, tractor, and spoilage costs associated with bunker silos when looking at the long-term investment of feed storage systems.

Freeman's research showed that the twenty year investment and operating cost of a 5,000-ton vertical storage system averaged $2.12 per ton, while a horizontal system with the same capacity cost $3.51 per ton, not including spoilage losses.

His research also showed on average 10 percent more loss with a horizontal silo than with a vertical silo. "For every one percent of feed lost in storage, it will cost the farmer $6 more per cow per year," said Freeman.

While Freeman's research showed that upright silos can be more cost effective, he did concede that horizontal silos can work if they're well-managed. The keys to well-managed horizontal silos are the packing, density, and good cover. Freeman shared research that showed density and packing quality significantly impacts forage quality.

town. "'Export for Scholars' will take classroom lectures to the next level by allowing students to actually participate in an agricultural export program.

"Students will come to appreciate the global impact of Pennsylvania agriculture and the economic opportunity available in the international arena. This program helps to emphasize that Pennsylvania agriculture has 'Products for the Planet.'"

"Export for Scholars" is part of the Department of Agriculture's "Action Plan for Pennsylvania Agriculture." To begin this marketing and education program, 20 open Holstein dairy heifers were selected last week by the Department of Agriculture, the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, Delaware Valley College, and W.B. Saul High School. Twelve of the heifers now are at the Delaware Valley College farm in Doylestown. The remaining eight are at W.B. Saul High School. Over the next six months, students will manage the heifers, select sires, breed the heifers, learn about export regulations, and observe port operations.

"Delaware Valley College is noted nationally as an institution where students are given opportunities to discover and develop their talents through experimental learning," Dr. Thomas C. Leamer, Delaware Valley College President, said. "Our students need to see that agribusiness today is global. 'Export for Scholars' is an excellent example of a collaborative effort between the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, and Delaware Valley College to provide our students with the finest practical education possible. This project will teach our students about business in ways found at few other institutions."

As part of the 'Export for

Ridge Administration Launches 'Export For Scholars' Program

Scholars' program, students will prepare a marketing plan for the export of Pennsylvania-bred dairy heifers to Puerto Rico, Mexico and other Spanish-speaking countries in the western hemisphere.

Students will prepare the graphics and translation for the production of a two-language marketing brochure in Spanish and English that will promote Pennsylvania Holsteins.

Through private donations, students will have the opportunity to travel to Puerto Rico for a "trade mission" in August to complete their export business by meeting with livestock professionals and dairy farmers who will purchase the bred dairy heifers.

"We are very excited at this cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture,' Thomas Scott, principal of W.B. Saul, said. "This is a wonderful opportunity for our urban students to visit Puerto Rico and operate in international trade."

In addition to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, Delaware Valley College, and W.B. Saul High School, the "Export for Scholars" partnership includes Johnson Livestock Company, Andre Ruiz of Puerto Rico, Sire Power, and the Port of Philadelphia.

PA DHIA To Shutdown Mainframe Operations After 43 Years

Pat Toretti
PA DHIA Staff Writer

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.)–After nearly 43 years of continuous operation that began in the basement of Old Main with a card-punch and mechanical calculator setup manned by extension staff and technical assistants, Pennsylvania DHIA is shutting down its mainframe computer operations. And for DRPC manager Jim Boyer, it can't come a minute too soon. "This is the culmination of a project we began about two years ago, but we really didn't get up a full head of steam until this past October," says Boyer. "From now on, the mainframe we all knew and loved for most of our careers is history. Pennsylvania DHIA has become the first Dairy Records Processing Center in the United States to move its entire large-scale operation to the PC platform." The list of firsts is not new to PA DHIA, which was the first DHIA in the US to test for protein, the first to test SCC, had the first computerized DHIA lab in the country, was arguably the first DHIA to generate significant MUN testing, had the first Windows '95 farm management programs of any US DRPC, and was the first American processing center on the Internet.

What will the change mean to Pennsylvania dairymen who use PA DHIA's system? "Not much actually," says Boyer, "on the other hand, quite a lot. Not much, because we've actually been running the new system parallel with the mainframe for some months to make sure we'd worked all the bugs out. As a matter of fact, many farmers have already received their third set of test results from the new system. They should not have noticed a difference at all."

"At the same time, we'll be saving a tremendous amount on maintenance and other expenses that are part of the cost of doing business when you're dealing in big iron. We're not dealing in big iron anymore. We'll save at least 10% in operating costs the first year alone. And in terms of capitalization, we have gone from about $100,000 per year we had to amortize forever, to effectively zero."

"There are huge incidental costs associated with mainframe operations," Boyer continues, "you have to provide physical security and environmental controls for large computing .centers, and you have to pay a premium price for software and operating systems that aren't mass produced the way PC's are. Here's just one example of a cost most people don't know about that's associated with processing on large platforms: With mainframes you've got to pay big bucks for a disaster recovery program. In the nature of the game you simply must assume that your computer–no matter how big or small–is going to crash. With a large operation you've got to be prepared to move archives, live files, developers and support people to a complete backup operation on retainer somewhere in the event of a catastrophe. That's a part of the cost of doing business. By contrast, we can now afford to have multiple redundant systems in the event of failure at a fraction of the cost. In the very worst case scenario–where all of our equipment is completely destroyed–we can go to our off-site backup, pick up a tape that has all the cows, all the tests, and all the lactations ever recorded in Pennsylvania on a single tape about the size of a pack of cigarettes. And on the way back from the U-Store we can stop at Sam's Club and buy the computer we'll use to resume operations. That's the kind of flexibility we now have."

But the cost benefits were not the real motivation to move the operation, Boyer admits. "What we were interested in doing was maximizing the productivity of our developers. Simply put, the mainframe is no place to develop software. It's a waste of time and it's a frustrating environment for serious program development. By moving our operations out of the mainframe we accomplish two things: First, those legacy programmers almost instantly became more productive. Second, because we can now focus all of our energy on the PC–where the future is–we aren't wasting half of our talent in a dead programming world."

Does it really matter all that much where a programmer plugs his keyboard in? "Yes!" answers an enthusiastic Joe Hayes, a former Clinton county dairy farmer who's spent the last twenty seven years in program development for PA DHIA. "For the last two years the people in the mainframe group have been watching the PC developers working on Heifer '98, Barn Owl 2000, and a number of other projects and we've been saying 'when do we get to do these cool things?" Now, all of us get to code on the edge. It's more satisfying work for us, and if the reception that we've gotten from our Windows '95 programs at the district meetings is any indication, it's a lot more productive work for our farmers and the consultants who support them."

"You also have to consider this," Boyer adds, "the talent pool to develop dairy records programs throughout the entire world is an extremely small, extremely specialized group of people. With the red-hot job market for programmers right now, you're very lucky to retain people for more than two, possibly three years.

But haven't people been doing records on PC's for a long time? "Let's be clear about what we're talking about here." Boyer responds. "We are not talking about a new farm management program, or even a pure 'Official Records' system for PC's. What we are talking about are all the functions provided by a dairy records processing center: invoicing, affiliate management, lab analysis, control of the analytical instruments, QCS reporting requirements, transmissions to and from technicians, records sent to USDA, monthly summaries for county agents, benchmarks for vets and agribusiness consultants, breed association classification and formats, and even early sire summaries."

"I'm not exaggerating when I say that we've got a drop-in replacement for a small–say Lancaster or Maryland sized affiliate–that will fit on the General Manager's desktop with no problem, and run on off-the-shelf hardware and software. Not emulation cards. Not expensive gimmicks that make the PC think it's a mainframe–this runs on a Windows NT or Windows 2000 type system." What about larger affiliates? Boyer is equally confident: "With processing equipment costing less than $5000, our capacity planning says you can handle 750,000 cows per month, comfortably. That fits the largest DHIA's in the US–probably the world. In Pennsylvania, our daily processing time went from 6 ½ hours on the mainframe to 16 minutes, on average, on the NT machine."

So what's next? "We need to focus on a number of needs specific to our internal operations first." Says Boyer. "It's important to give credit to everybody on Pennsylvania DHIA's team, because everyone has had some hand directly or indirectly in this effort. As the DRPC slaved over the mainframe conversion and the first release of Barn Owl 2000, our technicians had to pick up a certain amount of slack, and we've also neglected some of our efforts in our lab, where–once again–people have helped the development team by putting their own time in to balance the load. So those folks have also been an important part of our efforts to improve the DRPC. To address their needs we'll have a Window's version of our Barn Sheet program that works more closely with Barn Owl and adds some new data entry features this spring. We'll be moving all of our technicians to Internet access at the same time, and we'll provide a complete workflow tracking system to our lab management as well as technicians, field managers, and interested farmers."

Even with the installation of a brand new computer system behind them, it sounds like the PA DHIA DRPC's work is far from done.

Pork Checkoff, Under Fire, Will Undergo Referendum

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Monday last week, USDA Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman announced that a referendum would be conducted on the pork checkoff.

USDA is reacting to a coalition calling itself the Campaign for Family Farms, comprised of rural groups in several states, and other entities, who were tasked to come up the required amount of signatures — 15 percent of bona fide pork producers — to allow the referendum, according to the Pork Act and Order passed by Congress in 1985.

A full-page ad appeared in the New York Times on Feb. 28, "America's last family farms?", which listed almost two dozen organizations that support the referendum. The ad was put together by the Turning Point Project, based in Washington, D.C., and includes Farm Aid, Center for Food Safety, the Humane Society, the Land Institute, Rodale Institute, Grassroots International, Earth-Save International, Pesticide Action Network, and others, which identified commodity checkoff programs and who come out strongly against what they call "factory farms." These groups support the petition drive, according to In Motion Magazine.

David Reinecker, president of the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council (PPPC), noted that member-producers of the PPPC are concerned that the rules be followed. Fifteen percent of bona fide pork producers have to sign the petition for a referendum in order to have a vote on the checkoff.

Though the list may have been incomplete, and filled with what critics are saying has duplicate names and those who don't even produce pork, Glickman proceeded with his OK of the vote. According to Reinecker, the issue may be if these rules are not followed, and the referendum is called for anyway, "what other rules are they going to suspend?" he said.

"Who gives the secretary of agriculture the power to override rules?" said Reinecker.

PPPC and National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) members are concerned that the voting is equitable and fair and follows the rules outlined in the Pork Act. But so far, the voting on the referendum itself has been "really, really, really flawed," Reinecker said.

The date itself for the vote on the referendum is undetermined.

But if the checkoff is voted out, the councils will have to revert to the all-volunteer checkoff that existed the first 20 years. Then, about 60 percent of the producers contributed to the voluntary checkoff. Losing almost half the money to operate "is certainly going to have an impact on the program for producers," Reinecker said.

The checkoff, he said, benefits the smaller producers in many ways. The larger producers, the Murphys and Smithfields, are big enough that their own promotional and educational programs can continue.

According to Herb Schick, secretary-treasurer of the PPPC, the 80 nonprofit organizations that support the New York Times ad came up with 18,000 signatures. But according to the Pork Act, the signatures must be from bona fide producers — and many signatures were not valid.

"Are they pork producers?" said Schick. "Are they farmers?"

Schick noted that he has not personally spoke to any producer who doesn't want the checkoff, a mandatory program that allows all producers to be part of a "fair and equitable system that provides them with programs in the areas of research, education, and promotion," according to the umbrella organization of PPPC, the NPPC. The program was voted into existence by producers in 1988.

The only money for operating expenses for the PPPC — a group that also promotes pork — comes from the checkoff. The rest is raised by the group itself at auctions such as the one conducted at the group's annual Pork Expo.

The reason for the referendum, Schick believes, is because of the low prices the industry suffered in 1998-1999.

"I don't see why they are placing the blame on the Pork Council," he said. The voluntary organization helps producers throughout the state in education, research, and other areas to promote pork.

But the referendum may force more communication. "We need to get our act together and show the producers we've done a good job," Schick said.

In the February 2000 Pigs Pen, a newsletter from PPPC, the Pork The Other White Meat campaign is driving positive attitudes. "More U.S. consumers have favorable opinions of pork in recent years thanks, in part, to the producer-funded" advertising and promotion campaign, according to the article.

The survey found 87 percent of the Americans who have seen or heard about pork through the promotional campaign are "much more likely to think favorably about pork in all areas, from taste to nutritional value. Eighty percent of consumers aware of the campaign also reported they would most likely be eating pork within the next month, compared to 60 percent of consumers unaware of the pork campaign."

The article noted that 56 percent of consumers surveyed this year have a favorable opinion about pork, up from 47 percent of 1993. The campaign is funded form the checkoff.

In 1999, $20.9 million, or 57 percent of the national pork checkoff dollars, were invested in domestic demand enhancement programs. USDA is forecasting U.S. pork consumption for 1999 at 53.9 pounds per person, 1.3 pounds higher than last year and the highest per-capita consumption since 1981.

At the recent National Pork Industry Forum conducted early this month in Kansas City, Mo., pork producer delegates overwhelmingly approved a resolution calling for USDA to develop and implement an open, fair, transparent, and cost-effective voting procedure for the pork checkoff referendum.

Barb Determan, producer delegate from Early, Iowa, and president-elect of the NPPC, said producer representatives attending the Pork Forum wanted to send a strong, unified voice to USDA.

"Producer-delegates want USDA to enact rules allowing all bona fide producers and importers to have the right to vote based upon documented proof they have sold hogs and paid the checkoff during the representative time period, not to exceed 12 months prior to the date of the vote," she said.

NPPC intends to work with USDA and Congress to ensure a fair voting process be in place for the referendum.

NPPC represents 85,000 U.S. pork producers in 44 affiliated state associations, including PPPC. The checkoff amounts to $500 million annually.

According to the National Farmers Organization, U.S. producers paid nearly all of the $600 million used to fund commodity research and promotion programs last year.

The pork checkoff requires hog producers to pay 45 cents for every $100 of hog sales.

According to an article in The Telegraph Herald, Dubuque, Iowa, in January 1999, 14,000 hog farmers had signed the petition, and about 21,000 signatures were needed.

Video Highlights Forces Shaping Pennsylvania's Dairy Industry

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.)–What are the forces shaping Pennsylvania's dairy industry? Dairy farmers and dairy industry leaders share their thoughts in an upbeat video produced by the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders.

Titled "Harnessing the Forces," the six and one-half minute video provides positive examples of producers, processors, government and educators investing in the future of the state's dairy industry. It also highlights the many facets that make up Pennsylvania's number one agricultural industry.

According to N. Alan Bair, director of dairy industry relations for Penn State, the video serves as a strong educational tool for both agriculture- and non-agriculture audiences.

"The video is designed to give an uplifting message at the start of dairy producer meetings," Bair said. "It also would serve well in the classroom to help explain the diversity of Pennsylvania's dairy industry."

Partial funding for the video was provided by Land O'Lakes Inc., Pennsylvania Food Merchants Association, Pennsylvania Milk Dealers Association, and a matching grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

For a free copy of the video, contact the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders, 777 West Harrisburg Pike, Middletown, PA 17057; phone (717) 948-6328.

Crohn's-Johne's Connection: Scientists Look Into Controversy, Herd Control Options

21st Century Conference at the Grantville Holiday Inn.

What science has found is that a predisposition to acquiring Crohn's is inherited in 15-30 percent of the cases, according to the professor who studies disease in the human gastrointestinal (GI) tract. The disease is similar in humans in that it attacks the small Intestine, according to Bayless, but can attack any part of the intestinal tract.

Johne's, on one hand, is an illness that infects primarily young cattle. Clinical symptoms include diarrhea, loss of diet, reduction in the amount of milk in dairy animals, a general "gaunt" appearance of cattle, and other problems.

Crohn's, on the other hand, also affects young people — the average age of human onset of the disease is 27 years old, with similar symptoms.

Crohn's is more frequent in people of European descent, more common in whites, and is more common in Ashkenazi Jews. It is more common in urban and developed countries but remarkably is less common in those with poor sanitation as a child. There is increased severity in smokers. But there is no evidence it can be passed from human to human (including patient spouses, physicians treating CD, veterinarians treating Johne's, and farm workers or families working with herds infected with Johne's).

About 400,000 people in the U.S. have Crohn's disease. About 80 percent have surgery to get a specific diagnosis.

"Is (mycobacterium paratuberculosis — what causes Johne's) a human pathogen? Can it cause human disease?" said Bayless.

Bayless noted that there is no proof that the same bacterium causes Crohn's disease. Science cannot identify the antigen and there is no immune response.

To treat Crohn's, various antibiotics are used. Bayless provided a picture of a girl who had Crohn's onset at 10 years of age. She looked gaunt and had leg lesions.

Even former President Dwight D. Eisenhower was a victim of Crohn's. And he was a Pennsylvania farmer.

"Are farmers at risk of Crohn's disease?" Bayless said. Bayless noted the evidence is inconclusive. Sweden, which has no Johne's disease, has a high incidence of Crohn's.

The cause could be related to perhaps a bacteria, a virus, dietary, genetics, or some kind of combination of the above with a total immune system failure. More work is under way.

Though samples of human and cattle intestine match for response to Johne's and Crohn's infections, that could be simply because the intestinal tract has a limited response to any type of infection.

The Crohn's and Colitis Foundation of America spends $4 million annually to research the disease. They can be contacted at their Website, www.ccfa.org.

Bayless pointed to a recent workshop sponsored by the National Institute of Health on Dec. 14, 1998 to see if a connection between the two diseases could be made. These were the conclusions from the workshop summary available on the Website www.niaid.nih.gov/dmid-/crohns.html:

- There is insufficient evidence to prove or disprove that Mycobacterium avium subspecies paratuberculosis (MAP) is a human pathogen or that it is the cause of Crohn's disease. Considerable controversy continues to exist in the scientific community on this point.
- The difficulty in detecting and growing the organism, or being able to demonstrate a consistent immune response to it in Crohn's disease (CD) patients, continues to frustrate researchers.
- Newer methodologies including the detection of microbial DNA sequences and functional genomics are available and should be applied in the search for a microbial etiology of Crohn's disease. A wide net should be cast. Characterization of microbial "communities" associated with this disease should be sought. Comparison with the completed genome sequences of the related species M. tuberculosis, M. leprae, and M. avium may provide clues to the genetic basis of the pathogenesis of MAP.
- Good animal models for CD do not exist and should be sought. The development of additional genetically engineered mouse strains or primate models may be worthwhile, since current models do not develop much of the pathology associated with CD. Large animals, including sheep and cattle that get Johne's disease from MAP should be treated with vigorous antimicrobial, anti-inflammatory, and immunosuppressive treatment (typical of what is used in humans) in conjunction with molecular characterization of associated microbial populations and strains.
- If MAP is proven to be a human pathogen, there is the potential for an enormous impact on human health due to the prevalence of this organism on the farm and in water. Further study of MAP as a food and/or waterborne pathogen should be conducted. Viable MAP should be sought in commercial milk and other dairy products as well as in meat. Conclusive studies of the effectiveness of pasteurization using commercial equipment and process rather than laboratory simulations should be performed. In order to conduct the above, standard methods for the concentration, detection, and in vitro culture of Map should be developed and used by participating researchers. Federal agencies with regulatory authority over the food supply should consider conducting such research in cooperation with relevant food production industries and academic researchers.

Dr. Robert Whitlock, professor of the school of veterinary medicine at the University of Pennsylvania New Bolton Center, spoke about Johne's disease in cattle and how important control efforts are.

When asked about the possible connections of drinking raw, unpasteurized milk, Whitlock noted that he drank it as a child himself. But for those who drink it, the risk of ingesting Johne's is "very, very, very small."

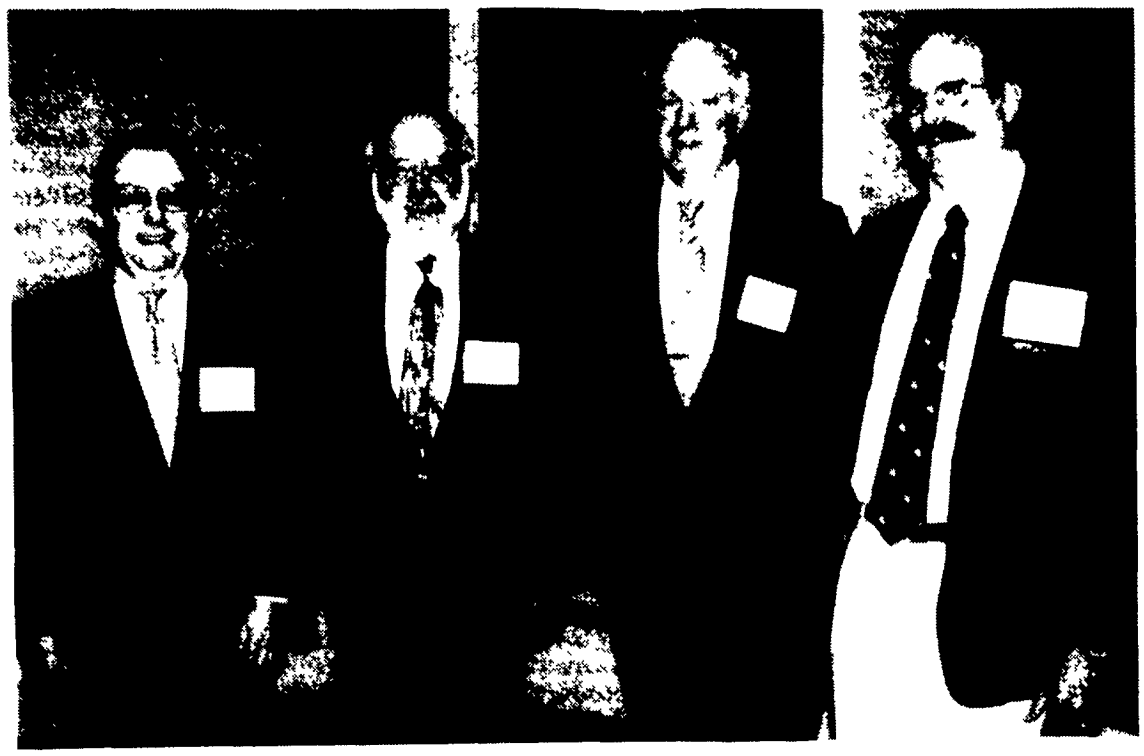
Also, the bacterium will not survive the pilot commercial pasteurization methods with their short-term, high temperatures, Whitlock noted.

However, dairy producers must learn to focus more on eradication programs, including culling the older, higher-shedding animals first and creating a program that is economically viable to protect the more valuable young stock.

Johne's is a chronic bacterial infection that begins in the young calf and can take a long time — as long as 10 years — to be clinically evident. But most animals on the farm that have it "don't show any clinical signs," Whitlock said.

Usually if the herd animal identified at the top is shedding and has clinic signs, there could be 15-20 animals infected that aren't showing any clinical signs. They look "perfectly normal," he said.

Also, cows in the summertime cooling off in a farm stream or pond can infect other cows readily.



Day two of the conference featured speakers, from left, Theodore Bayless, professor of medicine, head of gastroenterology, Johns Hopkins University; Ron Schultz, professor and chair of pathobiological sciences, School of Veterinary Medicine, University of Wisconsin; Robert Whitlock, professor, School of Veterinary Medicine, University of Pennsylvania New Bolton Center; and Dave Galligan, section chief of animal health, economics, and nutrition, School of Veterinary Medicine at University of Pennsylvania New Bolton Center.

Speakers at the Pennsylvania Agriculture in the 21st Century included, from left, Kenneth Bailey, associate professor of ag economics, Penn State; Dave Galligan, section chief of animal health, economics, and nutrition, School of Veterinary Medicine at University of Pennsylvania's New Bolton Center; Steve Watrin, director of dairy business services, Land O'Lakes, St. Paul, Minn.; Dave Pyburn, director of veterinary medicine, National Pork Producers Council; Julie Funk, extension food safety specialist, North Carolina Extension Service; Eugene Gantz, president, AgRisk Strategies Inc., Millersburg; Dan Ferber, free-lance science journalist, Urbana, Ill.; Ron Schultz, professor and chair of pathobiological sciences, School of Veterinary Medicine, University of Wisconsin; Ron Roberts, Sterling, Scotland; and Don Bell, poultry specialist, University of California.

Other animals, including dairy goats and deer are even more susceptible to it. Whitlocktion between the two diseases could be made. These were the conclusions from the workshop summary available on the Website www.niaid.nih.gov/dmid-/crohns.html:

- There is insufficient evidence to prove or disprove that Mycobacterium avium subspecies paratuberculosis (MAP) is a human pathogen or that it is the cause of Crohn's disease. Considerable controversy continues to exist in the scientific community on this point.
- The difficulty in detecting and growing the organism, or being able to demonstrate a consistent immune response to it in Crohn's disease (CD) patients, continues to frustrate researchers.
- Newer methodologies including the detection of microbial DNA sequences and functional genomics are available and should be applied in the search for a microbial etiology of Crohn's disease. A wide net should be cast. Characterization of microbial "communities" associated with this disease should be sought. Comparison with the completed genome sequences of the related species M. tuberculosis, M. leprae, and M. avium may provide clues to the genetic basis of the pathogenesis of MAP.
- Good animal models for CD do not exist and should be sought. The development of additional genetically engineered mouse strains or primate models may be worthwhile, since current models do not develop much of the pathology associated with CD. Large animals, including sheep and cattle that get Johne's disease from MAP should be treated with vigorous antimicrobial, anti-inflammatory, and immunosuppressive treatment (typical of what is used in humans) in conjunction with molecular characterization of associated microbial populations and strains.
- If MAP is proven to be a human pathogen, there is the potential for an enormous impact on human health due to the prevalence of this organism on the farm and in water. Further study of MAP as a food and/or waterborne pathogen should be conducted. Viable MAP should be sought in commercial milk and other dairy products as well as in meat. Conclusive studies of the effectiveness of pasteurization using commercial equipment and process rather than laboratory simulations should be performed. In order to conduct the above, standard methods for the concentration, detection, and in vitro culture of Map should be developed and used by participating researchers. Federal agencies with regulatory authority over the food supply should consider conducting such research in cooperation with relevant food production industries and academic researchers.

Dr. Robert Whitlock, professor of the school of veterinary medicine at the University of Pennsylvania New Bolton Center, spoke about Johne's disease in cattle and how important control efforts are.

When asked about the possible connections of drinking raw, unpasteurized milk, Whitlock noted that he drank it as a child himself. But for those who drink it, the risk of getting Crohn's is "very, very, very small."

Also, the bacterium will not survive the pilot commercial pasteurization methods with their short-term, high temperatures, Whitlock noted.

However, dairy producers must learn to focus more on eradication programs, including culling the older, higher-shedding animals first and creating a program that is economically viable to protect the more valuable young stock.

Johne's is a chronic bacterial infection that begins in the young calf and can take a long time — as long as 10 years — to be clinically evident. But most animals on the farm that have it "don't show any clinical signs," Whitlock said.

Usually if the herd animal identified at the top is shedding and has clinic signs, there could be 15-20 animals infected that aren't showing any clinical signs. They look "perfectly normal," he said.

Also, cows in the summertime cooling off in a farm stream or pond can infect other cows readily.

Other animals, including dairy goats and deer are even more susceptible to it. Whitlock pointed out a Bison herd in Montana that had a high level of infection — about 25 percent of the total herd of 3,400.

One infected dairy cow could be shedding a billion organisms of the Johne's bacterium a day. And that could amount to huge herd losses. If sold as meat, about 115 pounds difference in body weight could result, or about a $45 per cow loss. In terms of milk loss, cows could lose about 3,000 pounds per year for a loss of about $386 per cow.

Those can add up. On a 100-cow herd, that could total a loss of $22,700 per year. Overall, Johne's spells a $200 million a year loss to the dairy industry.

And the public perception of Johne's could spell real problems for the dairy industry. Whitlock pointed out a book by Robert Cohen, who has a doctorate in nutrition, according to the New Bolton Center vet professor. The book, "Milk: The Deadly Poison," makes claims that could create real problems with the public's perception of the industry.

In Lancaster and Chester counties alone, some believe up to 50 percent of the dairy herds are infected. There are 670,000 dairy cattle in the state, and Whitlock noted that 50,000 of those cattle may have Johne's.

And other states are no better. Whitlock noted that one official noted that in California, Johne's is present in all herds.

Before too long, it may become feasible and profitable for dairies to sign up and become Johne's certified free. In the future, milk could be marketed that way.

In recent Pennsylvania state budget hearings, there was a recommended doubling of appropriations for state Johne's testing, according to Sam Hayes Jr., state secretary of agriculture. The Pennsylvania Johne's Disease Program is a cooperative effort involving the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Penn State, University of Pennsylvania, USDA, and the state cattle industry. For more information, call (717) 783-5301.

In June, it is expected to be officially announced that Pennsylvania has achieved bovine tuberculosis-free status. And Pennsylvania could also be going into Stage V in the swine pseudorabies eradication effort and perhaps be pseudorabies-free by June of 2001, noted Hayes.

It may be important in the future to adapt the principles of the Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program, or PEQAP, to the dairy beef industry in the state, according to Hayes.

In the meantime, working closely to obtain a certified Johne's-free dairy herd could be critical and provide very valuable information for dairy marketing, according to Dave Galligan, section chief of animal health, economics, and nutrition at the School of Veterinary Medicine at New Bolton Center.

Meanwhile, better, more accurate tests are needed to control errors and false Johne's identification tests. Improved testing and eradication efforts can help stop the huge losses accrued by culling cattle too early. A heifer early removal program or separate heifer purchasing program (contract rearing) could keep the disease out of the critical young herds.

To control Johne's, it is important to segregate the young stock quickly, use milk replacer, and cull infected animals.

'Bioterrorism' Growing Concern In Public Perception

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — U.S. borders are quite porous, noted a leading expert on "bioterrorism," and disease affecting crops and livestock can move in through a variety of ways.

Corrie Brown, professor and head of the Department of Pathology of the College of Veterinary Medicine at the University of Georgia, told about 180 educators, legislators, and agri- industry representatives that known biological terrorism has even been perpetrated on humans.

Brown, who spoke Thursday morning during the Pennsylvania Agriculture In the 21st Century Symposium on Profitability, pointed to a case in which a disgruntled worker in 1996 in Dallas, Texas injected shigellosis into jelly donuts at a company party. The pathogen put 12 people in the hospital and 45 people became sick.

Bioterrorism can even be used by the right people for the wrong reasons. Brown pointed out that in 1997, a virus was introduced into the rodent rabbit population in New Zealand to control them.

If something like that happens in New Zealand, said Brown, it "could happen anywhere," she said.

There are six billion people in the world generating a "tremendous amount of traffic," she said, bringing new plant and animal diseases into areas where they didn't exist before. In one case, some raccoon hunters picked up 500 raccoons from the Southeast into West Virginia, all perfectly legal at the time across state borders, not knowing some of them were rabid. As a result, the Mid-Atlantic and Northeast states have an unprecedented problem with rabid animals.

Hayes Issues Treatment Orders For Plum Pox Orchards

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)–Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. issued "treatment orders" for plum pox infected orchards in Adams County.

"In an attempt to protect the stone fruit growers and the related fruit industries of Adams County and Pennsylvania," said Hayes, "I am asking that the orchards infected with plum pox virus be destroyed. While the destruction of orchards is an unpleasant task, it is what is necessary from a biosecurity standpoint."

There is no alternative to destruction, Hayes said.

The "treatment orders" require that the infected orchards are to be removed by April 1. There are approximately 218 acres of infected trees.

Infected growers and nurserymen are eligible for eradication payments up to $1,000 per acre through an appropriation made by the General Assembly and signed by Gov. Ridge.

"The infected growers and nurserymen have shown great courage in the face of this devastating disease. They have also displayed admirable citizenship in their determination to protect other members of the stone fruit industry who are not known to be infected by the plum pox virus," said Hayes.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture has conducted ongoing meetings with Adams County fruit growers since September 1999, which has resulted in an "action plan" to fight the plum pox virus (PPV).

"As part of our continuing efforts to contain the newly-discovered plum pox virus, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture will test all orchards in the quarantine area two times during this year's growing season and all other stone fruit orchards across Pennsylvania at least one time this year," Hayes said.

Residential tress in the affected areas will also be tested for PPV.

Plum pox virus is a debilitating affliction that causes the stone fruit trees to have a severe drop-off in production. However, plum pox virus has absolutely no affect upon humans. Fruit from trees infected with the virus can be eaten by humans without any consequence.

PPV affects stone-bearing fruits, including plums, peaches, nectarines, and apricots. It is characterized by round spots (pox) on fruit, leaves, stems, and seeds. It does not kill trees, but makes fruit unmarketable and drastically decreases yields. PPV is transmitted from infected trees by aphids or by grafting. The strain detected in Pennsylvania is not transmitted in the fruit's seed.

First described in East Europe in 1910, PPV has spread to most countries on the European continent and to at least one country in South America. This is the first time PPV has been detected in North America.

Pennsylvania is a leading producer of fruit, ranking fourth nationally in peaches. Adams County is Pennsylvania's leading fruit-producing county.

In 1999, the value of Pennsylvania's stone fruit production was approximately $25 million. Adams County accounted for $10 million of the total.

USDA APHIS is working collaboratively with Pennsylvania because the PPV is a threat to the USA's fruit industry.

Both the National Farmers Union, who met in February at the 98th anniversary convention in Salt Lake City, Utah, and National Farmers Organization, commended Glickman on his announcement.

"We have for many years strongly urged the secretary to allow producers to vote on the pork checkoff program," said NFU President Leland Swenson. "The checkoff programs must be more accountable to the producers who fund them."

"Certainly all mandates should be reviewed periodically to determine their effectiveness based upon a changing agricultural landscape," said National Farmers Organization (NFO) President Paul Olson. Last year the NFO members took the position that a referendum should be conducted every five years to determine the program's future.

NFO members requested that Glickman set a date to allow pork and beef producers to vote on the viability of checkoffs.

That date has yet to be determined.

Meanwhile, the American Farm Bureau continues to support checkoff programs. David Winkles, a producer from Sumter, S.C and president of the South Carolina Farm Bureau, said the efforts of the commodity promotion programs "have increased production and processing efficiencies, help build demand, and expand both domestic and foreign consumption."

Jarolimek Named NPPC President

DES MOINES, Iowa–Craig Jarolimek of Forest River, N.D., is the new president of the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC). He was selected to lead the organization during the National Pork Industry Forum March 2-4 in Kansas City, Mo.

Jarolimek is owner and manager of his family's 5,000-head finishing operation in partnership with his wife, Dawn. They also raise wheat, barley, sugar beets, corn, and soybeans.

Barb Campbell Determan is the new president elect. Determan of Early, Iowa, runs Home Run Farm with her husband, Steve. The 300-sow farrow-to-finish operation markets 6,000 hogs annually. They also raise corn and soybeans.

Dave Roper of Kimberly, Idaho, is the new vice president. Roper is owner and manager of Magic Valley Pork. The family farm consists of a 140-sow farrow-to-finish operation that markets 2,400 hogs annually. The farm includes cattle, hay, dry beans, beets, potatoes, and corn on 300 acres.

Five producers were elected to three-year terms on the NPPC board of directors during the annual meeting of the NPPC Delegate Body: Determan of Early, Iowa; Roper of Kimberly, Idaho; Max Schmidt of Elma, Iowa; Keith Berry of Greencastle, Ind.; Roy Henry of Longford, Kan. One producer was elected to serve a one-year term on the board: Richard Brauer of Oakford, Ill.

Thomas Vincent of Perry, Iowa, was selected to the associate member seat on the NPPC Board of Directors representing Allied Industry. He will serve a two-year term. Vincent is president of Agri-Access, a division of Brenton Bank.

The Pork Industry Nominating Committee is responsible for selecting, interviewing, and recommending candidates for national leadership positions. Producers elected to the nominating committee were Dean Vantiger of Mt. Union, Iowa (producer-at-large seat); John Adams of Snow Hill, N.C. (Federation Council seat); and Jim Quackenbush of Chokio, Minn. (state president seat).

The following are results of a producer survey taken during the 2000 National Pork Industry Forum.

The survey had 162 producer responses. The average age of delegates was 47 years old. There were 44 state associations in attendance.

Hogs marketed (percent of delegates):

36 percent less than 2,000 per year

32 percent 2,000 to 10,000

32 percent more than 10,000

Sows owned (percent of delegates):

Farmland Preservation Application Deadline March 31

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.)–The Lehigh County Agricultural Land Preservation Board is accepting applications until March 31 from Lehigh County farmland owners with an interest in preserving their farmland through the sale of development rights.

Through this program, qualified farmland owners can apply to sell agricultural conservation easements to the commonwealth of Pennsylvania and/or the county of Lehigh. Agricultural conservation easements preserve farmland by permanently limiting all forms of nonagricultural development on eased farm properties.

In return for giving up development rights, landowners receive cash payments up to the difference between the fair market value and the agricultural value of their properties.

Applications may be picked up in Room 102 of the Lehigh County Agricultural Center, 4184 Dorney Park Road in South Whitehall. The deadline for submitting an application is Friday, March 31.

Pennsylvania Celebrates 100th Anniversary Of First Soil Survey

role in agricultural production.

In the soil survey, it is written that Lancaster County "is the most important cigar-filler district in the state and is indeed the largest tobacco-producing county in the United States." It was also recognized as one of the most fertile sections for agriculture in the country.

Back in 1900, the average sized farm in Lancaster County was 80 acres. A barn built in 1900 cost around $4,000, while a house built of brick or limestone cost $2,500.

A farmer could expect to pay $200 to $300 per acre for a good farm in Lancaster County in 1900. Corn averaged 75 to 80 bushels per acre while wheat yield between 20 and 35 bushels per acre.

Many things changed since then, including the purpose of the soil surveys. The 1900 soil survey was completed to analyze the most ideal soil types for tobacco production. Today soil surveys are used for almost anything imaginable, from storm water management to subdivisions and nutrient management.

According to state soil scientist Edgar White, the soils in all of Pennsylvania's 28 million plus acres have been surveyed. Bedford County was the last county to complete a soil survey in 1998.

Now USDA Natural Resource Conservation Service (NRCS) soil scientists work to update and digitize existing soil surveys. The digitizated surveys are available on the computer in Geographic Information Systems and for Precision Farming applications.

"Soil surveys are infinitely more important now than they were even ten years ago," said White. "What always amazes me is the variety of calls we get from people who are trying to use the surveys. There are a lot of state and federal regulations that address soil type."

The soil surveys are used by farmers, engineers, land use planners, subdividers, county commissioners, conservation offices, farmland preservation boards, sewer plant designers, and even college students.

White has worked as a soil scientist for 25 years, working for 14 years in Pennsylvania. He manages the soil survey program for Pennsylvania. Currently 10 soil scientists work throughout Pennsylvania to update and digitize the soil surveys. Their next goal is to make the soil surveys available over the Internet.

"We need more soil scientists than we currently have. But we don't have the money to fund them," said White."At the peak of completing soil surveys back in the late 1970s, we had as many as 45 soil scientists working on the surveys."

Many of those scientists were funded by the state, which cut the funding in 1980 when most of the counties were surveyed at least once.

For a county the size of Lancaster County, it would take 12 staff years to complete the soil survey. The process begins with the soil scientists going out and walking every mile of the county to dig and collect soil samples.

Once the soil samples are tested and identified, the information is entered into an aerial map that shows the landscape of the county. Aerial maps came into use in the 1940s. They allowed soil scientists to see exactly where they are in the county.

After all soil samples are taken, the information is entered into a report, which includes general information about the county, along with specific information about each soil.

Soil information includes engineering index properties, physical and chemical properties, and other features. The make up of the soil is also broken down in the book.

During the last soil survey of Lancaster County, five soil scientists worked on the project, which took them about three years to complete. This was the fourth revision of the original soil survey taken in 1900.

The 1985 survey was taken for land planning, limitations to land use, improvements to overcome limitations, and the impact of selected land uses. It included 89 map units and 35 soil series.

The soil surveys are funded by a cooperative agreement the USDA NRCS has with several groups, including Penn State, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection, the Association of Conservation Districts, and the State Conservation Commission.

According to White, soil surveys will continue to become more useful as soil scientists continue to collect more and more data. "We try to monitor what people are using the data for and then tailor the soil surveys to provide that information," said White.

"People are putting new demands on the information," he said. "So we have to collect more data to answer new questions."

For example, pesticide leeching has a lot to do with the amount of organic matter in the soil. The original soil survey of Lancaster County included some data about the organic matter content. But newer surveys include better, more specific information on the soil's organic matter.

So far updates and digitization for 40 of Pennsylvania's 67 counties have been completed or are in the process of being completed. Since there isn't enough funding available to update all of the counties at the same time, White said that the NRCS sets priorities for updating soil surveys.

"We set priorities based on the age of the existing survey and the need for a new survey," said White. "Then we look for counties that are willing to help fund the update and digitization process."

If two soil surveys are the same age, then the NRCS will decide which soil survey is updated first based on the need. For example, if one county has a small population and little land use changes, that county would take a lower priority than a county, with a soil survey the same age, which has a large population and a lot of land use changes.

Although White doesn't know of any celebrations currently planned for the 100th anniversary of the first soil survey in Pennsylvania, he does remember last year when Cecil County in Maryland commemorated the 100th anniversary of its participation as one of the first soil surveys completed nationally.

The National Cooperative Soil Survey (NCSS) also celebrated its centennial anniversary last year by opening an "Underground Adventure" exhibit at the Chicago Field Museum of Natural History. That exhibit is expected to attract more than 15 million people over the next 20 years. The NCSS also hosted other exhibits, publications, and town meetings to remind people of the soil survey's importance.

"For 100 years, soils surveys have provided value in letting people know what their soil resources are and how to best manage them," said White. "That value will grow even greater as we collect more data and make them more easily accessible to people through the Internet and digitization."

Modern technology allows soil scientist Edgar White to view digitized soil surveys on the computer. White expects that these soil surveys will soon be accessible to everyone over the Internet.

With four soil surveys completed on it in the past 100 years, the last including more than 150 pages and 89 mapping units, Lancaster County's soils have been identified as some of the most fertile soils in the United States.

Located in the Hagerstown Loam valley, this farm was included in the first soil survey in Lancaster County completed 100 years ago. Do you know where this farm is and what it looks like today?

General Mills and Land O'Lakes Announce Supply Chain Alliance

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.– Land O'Lakes, Inc. and General Mills, Inc. recently announced that the two companies have formed an innovative supply chain alliance, to engage in joint purchasing and refrigerated distribution activities.

The alliance is expected to generate purchasing synergies and improved customer service for both companies and will utilize new web-based technologies from Nistevo.com, officials of General Mills and Land O'Lakes said.

"We are very excited about partnering with Land O'Lakes, and we see significant purchasing savings by combining our companies' efforts," said Randy Darcy, General Mills Senior Vice President, Supply Chain. "In addition, the distribution of our refrigerated products with Land O'Lakes will allow us to improve service and reliability to our customers by reducing the number of customer stops per truck load."

"We have already been able to capitalize on some purchasing efficiencies and expect additional savings opportunities over the next several months," said Chris Policinski, Land O'Lakes Executive Vice President and Chief Operating Officer for the Dairy Foods Value-added Group. "Now, by pooling our distribution resources, we will improve service and better manage inventories for our customers."

General Mills (http://www.generalmills.com) is a leading consumer foods marketer with sales exceeding $6 billion. In addition to Yoplait and Colombo yogurt, and Lloyd's refrigerated entrees, the company's U.S. businesses include Big G cereals, Betty Crocker mix products, and snack foods such as Fruit Roll-Ups, Pop Secret microwave popcorn, and Chex Mix. The company's expanding international operations include a worldwide cereal joint venture with Nestle and a snacks joint venture in continental Europe with PepsiCo.

Land O'Lakes (http://www.landolakesinc.com) is a national farmer-owned food and agricultural cooperative, with sales approaching $6 billion in all 50 states and more than 50 countries. It is a leading marketer of a full line of dairy-based consumer, foodservice, and food ingredient products across the U.S.

Avian influenza, highly pathogenic and costing millions of dollars in eradication efforts and lost birds in the early '80s here, is undergoing a serious outbreak now in Italy. Newcastle disease is causing the broiler industry to literally close in Australia.

The "Superbowl," said Brown, of outbreaks was the Taiwanese outbreak of foot of mouth disease brought in with Chinese pigs, killing eight million hogs and costing $25 billion. About a half million metric tons of pig carcasses had to be disposed of, creating environmental issues.

Producers need to concern themselves about the global problems associated with diseases. The interrelationship we have now with global marketplaces puts new emphasis on putting bioterrorism into perspective.

Some are pointing to the effects of Pfiesteria piscicida contamination of the Chesapeake Bay, which not only kills fishes but humans who come in contact with it experience skin ulcers and "cognitive deficits" or short-term memory loss that could last months.

And now, with traditional small family farm agriculture being replaced by large-scale agribusiness enterprises, noted Brown, biological terrorism, if it occurs, can affect many industries in a big way.

Russia, where the "ruble has turned to rubble," Brown noted, once was home to 15,000 scientists alone skilled in some form of biological warfare. They've since left their country, simply to take up home in other countries that can pay them.

Here in the U.S., the USDA is doing all it can to prevent the terrorism. "But they need more funding," she said. "People in the USDA are trying hard, but the general public has a poorer appreciation about what it takes to take care of our livestock."

Right now, scientists are only learning about plant and animal disease. Potential "crossovers" to humans are another concern in which the parameters have yet to be mapped out.

New Way To Protect Meat

WASHINGTON, D.C.–A new way to protect consumers from harmful bacteria that may be found in meat has been discovered by scientists from California State Polytechnic University, Pomona. The results of their research were presented at a USDA-sponsored conference on foodborne bacteria that was held recently.

The breakthrough involves applying a small amount of lactoferrin from cow's milk to the surface of meat during processing. Lactoferrin is a naturally-occurring protein in mammalian milk that is credited with protecting infants from harmful bacteria while their immune systems are developing. By discovering how to activate the lactoferrin molecule, scientists were able to mimic its function on meat.

Laboratory tests showed the activated form of lactoferrin to be effective against more than 30 different kinds of harmful bacteria, including E. coli O157:H7, Salmonella and Campylobacter. Lactoferrin does not change the taste, flavor, color, or appearance of meat.

"We have borrowed a page from mother nature," said A.S. "Narain" Naidu, Ph.D., a medical microbiologist who heads the Center for Antimicrobial Research at Cal Poly Pomona. "We have taken a natural compound with antimicrobial properties and discovered a way to make it work on meat surfaces to provide a protective barrier against harmful bacteria."

The University's research involved applying an activated form of lactoferrin to meat tissue surfaces that had been purposefully contaminated with extremely high concentrations of bacteria. The lactoferrin formulation proved effective in removing E. coli O157:H7 which has been linked to recent meat-related illnesses.

"The research objective was to use lactoferrin to prevent bacteria from attaching and multiplying on meat surfaces using the same natural compound that has functioned this way in mammals for thousands of years," said Dr. Naidu, who has studied lactoferrin and other natural antimicrobial agents for nearly 20 years.

According to Dr. Naidu, the amount of activated lactoferrin required to protect a serving of meat is thousands of times less than the amount of lactoferrin found in a single glass of milk. Lactoferrin currently is produced from whey, a by-product in the manufacture of cheese from cow's milk.

Dr. Naidu said activated lactoferrin can be applied easily to meat products at the processing plant as an added step to the meat industry's existing multiple-hurdle bacterial control process. Because lactoferrin remains on the meat surface, he said the compound may provide lasting protection from bacterial exposure after processing.

Research funding and support were provided to Cal Poly Pomona by Farmland National Beef, the only farmer-rancher owned beef processor in the country and the fourth-largest beef processor overall. Based in Kansas City, Mo., Farmland National Beef Company is jointly owned by Farmland Industries, Inc., and U.S. Premium Beef.

Dairy Industry Calls for Producer Input on Maryland's Nutrient Management Regulations

WASHINGTON, D.C.–The State of Maryland should include dairy producers and their industry representatives in developing nutrient management regulations, according to the Maryland Dairy Industry Association (MDIA).

The state industry group representing more than 800 dairy farm families says that practical on-farm experience is necessary in order to draft state regulations that protect both producers and the state's natural resources.

MDIA was reacting to the Maryland Department of Agriculture's (MDA) proposed regulations that require the state's agricultural producers to develop and implement nutrient management plans for their farms. The association convened a task force of producers, academic, and Extension officials to review and prepare comments on MDA's recently published draft of proposed regulations.

"Maryland's proximity to urban centers and the Chesapeake Bay makes our nutrient management proposals unique among our sister states," says Myron L. Wilhide, a third-generation dairy producer and president of the Maryland Dairy Industry Association. "We believe that comprehensive cost-sharing, easy access to qualified advisory personnel, and practical producer input are critical to developing an acceptable nutrient management plan."

MDIA's recommendations to Royden Powell, the Maryland Department of Agriculture's assistant secretary for resource conservation, emphasized these points:

- Maryland Department of Agriculture should appoint a producer/advisory committee to have input in and oversight of the state's Nutrient Management Manual regulating on-farm plans;
- Nutrient management plans should be farm-specific, encompassing size, management history, and economics of that operation;
- Maryland Department of Agriculture should be the primary and regulatory authority on nutrient management plans, not environmental agencies;
- Adequate cost-sharing and/or financial assistance, as well as professional counsel, should be made available to producers for state-required nutrient management plans;
- Nutrient management plans should include assistance for any required off-farm storage, transportation, and disposal of manure;

Maryland is requiring dairy and other producers to review and comment on proposed nutrient management regulations no later than March 15, 2000.

'Mrs. President' Fills Life With Music, Cooking, Farm Women

"It's easier for me to cook for 200 than two," said Catherine Schott, president of the Society of Farm Women of Pennsylvania. As kitchen manager of the Lebanon County Expo Center, Schott is well known for her superb cooking and for her vivaciousness.

Catherine collects angel and pig figurines, but her most cherished collection of teacups and saucers is stored in this family heirloom china closet.

Although they are no longer active farmers, Catherine and Leonard Schott enjoy the view surrounding their little house that overlooks 110 acres of their farmland.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — With a tip of his hat and a slight nod, an employee stops what he is doing to respectfully greet Catherine Schott.

"Mrs. President," he murmurs.

Catherine gives a hearty laugh and explains to a visitor, "That's what they've been calling me ever since I became president of Farm Women."

As head of the 2,459 membership of the Society of Farm Women of Pennsylvania, Catherine has the distinction of being the first woman from Lebanon County to head the organization during its 86-year history.

It's a honor that Catherine values with a bit of trepidation. She said, "I have a concern that I will be able to do the job well. But I have my committees to rely upon. I couldn't fill the office without them."

For a person who was signed up for membership without her permission, Catherine certainly has become a model leader. To understand how she became a member without permission, one needs to understand the background.

Catherine did not grow up on a farm, but she vowed since six years of age that she would marry a farmer. In high school, she met Leonard Schott.

"We met in band. He played the flute, and I played the oboe," she said.

Leonard was shy and was immediately charmed by Catherine's vivaciousness — a trait she continues to exhibit to this day.

When Leonard asked her to attend the Pennsylvania Farm Show to watch him exhibit pigs and heifers, Catherine was hooked with both the farmer and the intricacies of farm-related activities.

After high school graduation, Leonard, foreseeing that he would be drafted, joined the army. It was the couple's intention to wait until his service term ended and be married.

In those days, membership to Farm Women was limited because so many wanted to join. A limit was set upon membership dependent upon the number that could comfortably fit inside a home where meetings were held.

Leonard's mother was a charter member of Lebanon Society 7. She requested that the 28-member limit be changed so that her future daughter-in-law could join. The members agreed. The only hitch was that Catherine knew nothing about it until members welcomed her when they saw her at church.

From this incident, Catherine feared that her mother-in-law might be controlling, but according to Catherine, "She wasn't at all. She just liked Farm Women so much she was certain I would too."

She was right.

Later her mother-in-law said, "I knew you'd be good for our group."

She proved that right also. Catherine has served numerous offices in the local, county, and state levels.

The couple married before Leonard had finished his tour with the army, and Catherine joined him in Pittsburgh where he was stationed.

"We'd come home (Lebanon County) Friday afternoon to cut the hay, make the hay on Saturday, load it on wagons, and pull into the barn," Catherine said. The following weeks the couple again rushed home to unload the hay.

When the couple were first married, Catherine did not know how to cook. Both her mother and grandmother were accomplished cooks who were in charge of cooking for fire companies and other community affairs. "Both of them were frugal and didn't want to waste a drop of food," Catherine said. "They didn't want to take a chance on me."

When the couple rented an apartment in Pittsburgh from an Italian woman, she was overheard to say, "Foolish American girl — she got married and can't cook."

The landlady took the responsibility to teach Catherine cooking basics.

"I learned to clean chickens and everything," Catherine said. It was a foundation that laid the groundwork for Catherine becoming one of the best known cooks in Lebanon County — but more on that later.

When the couple moved back to Lebanon County, their lifestyle continue to be a bit hectic. They did not live on the family farm, so every morning Catherine packed a lunch and their newborn baby to go with Leonard and help on the farm all day.

The couple eventually had three children, who are now married and have given the Schotts seven grandchildren.

In 1968, Leonard and Catherine moved to the farm. They changed from dairy to crop farming, but in 1971, a serious injury forced Leonard to give up farming.

In recent years, the Schotts sold the home farm to their daughter and her husband.

"I missed the farm more than Leonard did," Catherine said of one of the most difficult transitions of her life. Easing the separation is the fact that they live in a house surrounded by fields from the 110 acres they retained.

Leonard no longer crop farms but rents the ground and is in tractor sales for Keller Brothers.

In 1976, something happened that had an influence on the direction Catherine's focus was about to take. That year the 1976 wagon train came through Quentin, where Catherine grew up.

"You must help," Catherine's mother said of the food preparation needed for the community celebration.

"I told my mom, 'Never in my life will I do this (on a regular basis),'" Catherine related.

Surprisingly, Catherine discovered she enjoyed preparing the food, which included killing 50 chickens to make pot pie.

"But I wouldn't admit it to my mother," Catherine said.

More and more she began helping her mother with community fundraisers. She soon became known as the "hamboat lady," because hamboats became a popular fundraiser in the area.

After years of volunteer cooking, Catherine was asked in 1992 if she'd like to get paid for it. Now she manages the kitchen at the Lebanon County Expo Center. The site is used weekly to host events for many different groups in addition to agriculture-related events. About 16 women help Catherine with food preparation and serving. Most of these are of retirement age. Leonard refers to them as "not retired, just retreaded." He also is often asked to assist with the food preparation.

It's Lebanon Fair week that draws the largest crowd, and for that Catherine volunteers her time. For eight days she puts in 10-15-hour days to prepare breakfast, lunch, and dinner for about 10,000 people. During that week, three tons potatoes, 800 pounds of pork barbecue, 1,200 pounds hamburger patties, 40,000 drinks, and 6,000 sodas are served.

"It's easier for me to cook for 200 than for two," Catherine said. "I love my job and meeting all the people."

Catherine has another love in her life — music. As a young girl, the school chorus director told her that she has a good voice and offered to give her voice lessons.

"We formed the first girl's barbershop quartet — at least in this area," Catherine said. She sang bass.

She has been singing ever since. Although she has a wide range, she generally sings the soprano solos, such as she did for the state Farm Women's

Ida Risser

Is winter finished for this year? We have had warm days and the snow is gone. There is no more sledding on our steep meadow hill. I've brought some forsythia stems into the house and they are blooming. In the morning we watch a group of bluebirds sit on our three birdhouses.

When the grandchildren come for a few hours, we make cookies. The last time that they were here I cooked rather than baked some chocolate oatmeal cookies. If I don't cook them enough, they are rather sticky. When the oldest grandson walks home past our house, I hurry out with a few goodies for him. He does not say, "No, thank you." He is always hungry.

My high school class had their bimonthly luncheon last week. And, during a discussion on where to meet the next time, someone asked how many people in the room would be 80 years old this year. It was amusing to see most of the hands raised in answer to that question. One woman was told that she had the attitude of an old lady. She replied, "I am an old lady!"

My husband is driving a car again. He still uses a cane but he took himself to the barbershop as it was a necessary job after two months of being housebound. Everyday he thinks of someplace to go. Maybe a hardware store, the bank or even a visit to a faraway brother. Now we can visit other people's homes instead of entertaining them in our home.

We missed a lot of annual farm meetings this year but we can always look forward to next year's meetings.

convention in January.

In 1978, Quentin United Church of Christ advertised for a choir director. They asked Catherine to help out until they found someone. That was 23 years ago and she's still directing.

Choir practice forced Catherine to switch from Society 7 to Society 16 to accommodate scheduled meetings.

In addition to numerous offices held within her society, Catherine has been first and second vice president and president at the county level. At the state level, she has moved up through the ranks in three-year terms as director, secretary, second vice president, and first vice president. In January she was installed as president.

Catherine is reviving the Lebanon County Farm Women Chorus in preparation for the Spring Rally, which will be hosted in Lebanon County in May.

As president, Catherine selected the three-year theme: "Help Eliminate Hunger in the New Millenium."

"Our farms will play a large part in feeding the hungry of the world. If we as agriculture representatives can find a way to help eliminate some of the world's hunger, we will also be helping to promote food products produced on local farms," Catherine said.

Members are encouraged to donate food and raise funds for their local food banks.

Catherine collects angels, pigs, and cups and saucers.

Leonard enjoys sailing and computers, both self-taught.

"He is very knowledgeable. He never went to college, but he reads and knows everything," Catherine said.

Although many acquaintances are treating Catherine as royalty since she assumed the state Farm Women presidency, things haven't changed at home according to her husband Leonard. He said facetiously, "I've always bowed down to her. She gives the orders, I obey."

Catherine is well known for her sense of humor and outgoingness. She said, "If I'm not talking, then you know I'm upset."

Both attribute the secret to a long-lasting marriage to their faith and church involvement. In addition to musical events, Catherine has served as deaconess, Sunday school teacher, and in charge of fellowship meetings. Leonard was formerly on the cemetery board and numerous other committees.

"He's such an easygoing guy — so patient — something I've always had to work hard at," Catherine said.

"Another reason," Leonard slyly inserted, "is that I believe in recycling — don't throw anything away."

Here are two recipes for which Catherine is famous.

Pork Barbecue

5 pounds cooked pork, cut and chopped from 8-pound Boston butt
5 tablespoons vinegar
10 tablespoons granulated sugar
5 tablespoons prepared mustard
2½-3 cups catsup
5 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 cup pork broth
10 tablespoons pickle relish

Combine ingredients and simmer 30 minutes.

Baked Chicken Pot Pie

4 large potatoes, cooked and ¼sliced ¼-inch thick
2 cups hardcooked eggs, chopped

When she first married, Catherine overheard her Itali landlady say, "Foolish American girl — she got marri and can't cook." Today Catherine can compete with t best of the cooks. During Lebanon Fair week she volu teers 10-15 hour days to prepare breakfast, lunch, a dinner for about 10,000 people.

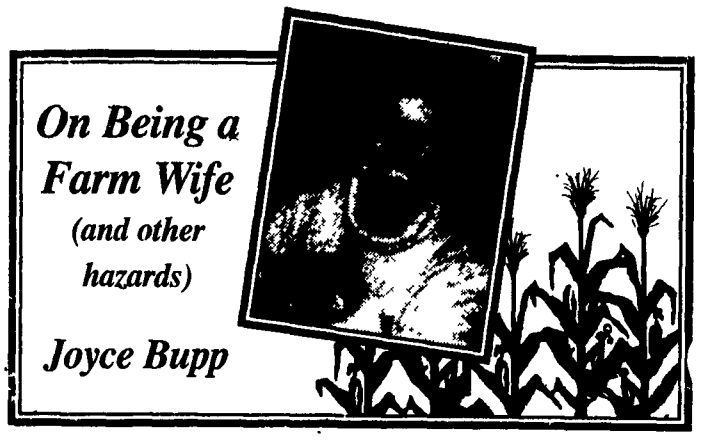
NOTHING RUNS LIKE A DEERE®

JOHN DEERE



The Internet, or the world-wide web, is a tremendous development of our modern computerized society.

It allows us to communicate with folks as close as in the next building or as far away as a country halfway around the world at the mere press of a key. It is revolutionizing retailing, enabling us to buy everything from auctioned collectible items to the week's grocery needs without every stepping out our doors. It provides access to a world of information at our fingertips, a boon for everyone from renowned scholars to elementary school kids researching some homework.

But, like nearly every other great development of society, the Internet has its down side. Sadly, a small percentage of users reportedly become addicted to cyber-participation life. Compulsive buyers find it too easy to spend way beyond their means with the flick of a few keyboard instructions. And the tales of hackers–from those seeking to pirate or destroy information to the mischief makers who delight in disrupting the system–have become unfortunate modern day legends.

Like millions of other households around the world, we are cyber connected. Our use of the Internet is limited by our lack of time and plus occasional frustration at trying to find what one wants out there in the world of more information than we could ever hope to find or use. Primarily, though, we "log on" to pick up our e-mail and keep in touch with friends and family scattered from the east to the west coasts.

Most of my e-mailing is done early in the morning, before heading to the barn to help with morning chores. Among the messages pretty often is some sort of off-the-wall humor piece forwarded by friends with funny bones. Like this through-provoking piece from comedian Steven Wright waiting for me on a recent 5 a.m. cyber-mail-check.

Think about this: Did you ever wonder . . .

-If a pig loses it's voice, is it disgruntled?

-Why is the man who invests all your money called a broker?

-Why are a wise man and a wise guy opposites?

-Why isn't the number 11 pronounced onety-one?

-When cheese gets its picture taken, what does it say?

-If a person who plays the piano is called a pianist, shouldn't a person who drives a race car be called a racist?

-Why do we say something is "out of whack?" What's "in whack?"

-Why do overlook and oversee mean the same thing?

-If Fed Ex and UPS were to merge, would they call it Fed Up?

-If it's true we are here to help others, what are the others here for?

-Ever wonder how fast the speed of lightning would be if it didn't zigzag?

-Why does no one believe a sign "wet paint" until they touch the surface to see?

-How much deeper would oceans be if sponges didn't live there?

-Since mothers use little spoons to feed their babies, what do they use in cultures where chopsticks are utensils of choice? Toothpicks?

-When someone offers "a penny for your thoughts" and you give them your two cents, what happens to the other penny?

-Why do croutons come in airtight packages when it was stale bread to begin with?

-Why do women wear evening gowns to nightclubs? Shouldn't they be wearing night gowns?

-If lawyers are disbarred and clergymen defrocked, shouldn't electricians be delighted, musicians denoted, cowboys deranged, models deposed, tree surgeons debarked and dry cleaners depressed?

And, finally . . . If a cow could laugh, would milk come out her nose?

(Brought to you by the magic of the Internet and my cyberhumorist, Martha . . .)

What To Do When Kids Swear

Explicit language may seem to be everywhere, but most parents don't want their children using it.

Herberg Lindgren, University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension specialist, offers four suggestions that parents can use to help children improve their vocabulary.

Don't overreact. A youngster usually takes delight in too strong a reaction to anything. Explain the impact of bad language. Tell children that it may upset, offend or insult others.

Also teach the concept that we can't make our point by using explicit language. Don't become the language police, instead, aim to persuade children to eliminate bad words.

Practice what you preach. Parents need to be aware of how they manage their anger and frustration. The greatest single influence on how young children communicate their feelings is still what they hear at home. Let them know you are trying to clean up your language so both parents and children can emerge on the side of self-respect.

Live Well On Less

We can learn to live on less without needless sacrifice.

Here are some ideas: Keep track, item by item of where your money goes every day, week or month.

Talk to the family about spending. Are you spending your money the way you really want? Do not carry more money with you can you can afford to spend.

Stage a garage sale to sell unwanted items.

Pay bills early; this may give you a discount and it will prevent late charges.

Check to see if you are eligible for the earned income tax credit which can result in a larger tax refund.

Become involved in less expensive sports and recreational activities.

Read magazines and books from the library; cancel subscriptions.

Analyze insurance coverage to be sure you are getting the lowest insurance rates.

Avoid malls–browsing results in impulse buying.

Gardening Is Exercise

If you don't think you get exercise when gardening, consider what the following activities do for your body: Squatting works leg muscles, firms thighs. Bending builds back strength, slims the waist. Spading strengthens biceps, triceps, legs and chest. Raking works the upper back, biceps and triceps. Pushing a loaded wheelbarrow uses almost every muscle in the body.

Fresh air is good for the lung. Sunshine is good for the complexion, hair and smile. Garden beauty is good for the soul!

Bring to a boil, stirring constantly for about 5-7 minutes. (Approximately 280° on a candy thermometer, the soft-crack stage.) Remove pan from heat. Immediately stir in extract. Quickly pour syrup over popcorn mixture. Stir thoroughly to make sure all pieces are coated. Serve immediately.

To make popcorn balls: grease hands with butter. Working fast, scoop up enough popcorn mixture to make a medium-sized ball. Shape firmly into ball and place on waxed paper. When balls are slightly cooled, re-grease hands and firmly press each popcorn ball again so shape will hold. Serve immediately or store in airtight container.

Serves 6 or 15-18 balls.

FAST AND EASY PEANUT BRITTLE

1 cup granulated sugar
½ cup light corn syrup
2 tablespoon water

In a 2 ½ quart microwave safe bowl, combine sugar, corn syrup, water, and salt. Stir well. Place in microwave, uncovered, and cook on high for 5 minutes. Add peanuts and continue to cook uncovered until syrup reaches hard crack stage, 3 to 5 minutes. (Hard crack stage is reached when syrup dropped into ice water separates into hard brittle threads and color of syrup is amber.)

Remove from microwave. Stir in butter and baking soda. Turn out on the oiled baking sheet and spread to ¼" thickness. When cooled and hard, crack into desired sized pieces.

Yields approximately 1 pound.

A harmonious blend of texture and flavor in Baked Almond Sole is achieved in this dish by coating the fish in lightly spiced almonds and bran flakes. A salad of wilted spinach, apples, and wild rice adds a spark of color and rounds out the dish.

Featured Recipe

Almonds and other nuts, seeds, and legumes are great natural sources for essential miners, fiber, and protein. They are low in saturated fat and contain no cholesterol.

One ounce of almonds provides 35 percent of the Daily Value for vitamin E, an important antioxidant, and contains as much calcium as ¼ cup milk.

Try these tasty ways to reach your 4-5 weekly servings of nuts, seeds, and legumes:

- Add nutty flavor to rice, couscous, barley or pasta with chopped or slivered almonds. If your tastes run sweet, toss in some plump raisins and apple pieces.
- Sprinkle chopped almonds on fresh, frozen or canned fruit salad.
- Try chopped almonds on any salad you can think of.
- Make a crispy topping for chicken or fish by mixing almonds, lemon juice, garlic, parsley, pepper, and a couple of tablespoons water in a blender or food processor until blended and spread on chicken or fish before baking. Give both hot and cold cereal a satisfying crunch by adding slivered or chopped almonds.
- Toss whole almonds in a vegetable stir-fry or add slivered almonds to steamed vegetables.

Here is a recipe adapted from Chef Brad Albers of Cafe Pacific, Dallas, Texas.

BAKED ALMOND SOLE WITH WARM WILD RICE SALAD

¾ cup wild rice
1½ cups water
½ cup sliced almonds
½ cup bran flakes
½ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt, divided
½ pepper, divided
4 (3-ounce) fillets of sole
2 egg whites, lightly beaten
1 tablespoon rice vinegar
1 tablespoons olive oil
4 cups lightly packed spinach leaves
2 apples, cored and thinly sliced into wedges
1 carrot shredded

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Coat baking sheet with vegetable oil cooking spray. In medium saucepan over medium-high heat, bring rice and water to boil. Reduce heat to low, cover and simmer about 40 minutes until rice is tender and water is absorbed.

Meanwhile in resealable plastic bag, crush almonds and bran into coarse crumbs. In shallow bowl, mix flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Evenly coat each fillet with flour mixture. Dip into egg, then coat with almond mixture.

Lay each fillet on baking sheet; bake 10 to 12 minutes, until cooked through. Meanwhile to make vinaigrette, in bowl, whisk vinegar, oil, and remaining salt and pepper. In nonstick skillet over medium heat, combine half the spinach, apples, carrot and rice with 1 tablespoon vinaigrette. Cook and toss until spinach is slightly wilted and salad is warm. Remove to bowl and repeat with remaining salad ingredients. Divide salad and sole among four plates. Serves 4.

Secure Online Shopping

The online auction site has a used saxophone that is just right for your teenager playing in the high school jazz band.

You want to order a sweater from a company that doesn't have a store in your area but has a website? You want a book that is not available in your local bookstore but you can get it from an Internet site? How do you know if this is really a good way to shop?

A December 30, 1999 article in The New York Times reported that Internet holiday sales increased 300 percent from the year before. Total online sales for 1999 are estimated to total nearly $40 billion. You can see that this type of shopping has become a significant part of our retail environment.

How does the consumer protect himself or herself in the absence of face-to-face contact with the seller?

Know the Seller

There are a number of issues to consider here. First, what do you know about the seller? Do you have prior experience with the company through in-store purchases or telephone orders? Ask your friends about experiences they may have had.

The Federal Trade Commission and The American Bar Association suggest that you be sure the seller has a street address (not just a post office box) and a phone number on the website. A web address can disappear into cyberspace and leave you with no alternative way of contacting the company. Beware of dealing with companies in other countries. You may not have the same rights as you would with a domestic company.

The website, BizRate.com, rates e-businesses by asking tens of thousands of customers about their experiences. Questions cover product selection and quality, delivery experience, and privacy policies. The BizRate.com service is free to the consumer, and retailers do not pay to be rated. It is a good way to check out small retailers.

Many online auction sites have "feedback" areas where you can find other customers' experiences with a seller. Generally these "feedback" areas are reliable. The Federal Trade Commission has experienced an increase in complaints about online auction fraud.

The most common complaint is non-delivery of items purchased. Other scams include sellers bidding up their own products and fabricating "feedback" information. The FTC is working with auction sites to improve consumer protection.

Pay Safely

Before placing an order, check the security on the seller's website. Many websites use Secure Sockets Layer technology to encrypt credit card information. If the web address begins with "https" rather than "http," this technology is in place. A website is also secure if it displays a locked padlock, an unbroken key (Netscape Navigator), or the icon of a lock on the status bar (Microsoft Internet Explorer). Buy only from vendors that protect your financial information. Paying by credit card is the safest way. According to federal law, if you have an unauthorized charge on your card, your maximum liability is $50.

If you have used a credit card, you may be able to dispute a seller's charge if your order does not arrive or if you return an item.

Cathy Bowen, Penn State Cooperative Extension Professor of Consumer Issues Programming, suggests having a credit card to use exclusively for online shopping. Should the security of this card be compromised, your other cards will still be available for your use. Having a low credit limit for this card would further reduce your exposure in case of fraudulent use. It is still a hassle to straighten up a credit card mess even if your liability is limited to $50.

Protect Your Privacy

Consumer Reports magazine advises consumers to check out the web seller's privacy policy. Web sellers are not currently required by law to respect the privacy of people who order from their sites. The seller may collect data on the site pages you visit, the products you buy, when you buy them and where you ship them. The seller may then provide this information to other marketers.

You may then get more junk mail and junk phone calls. If you don't find a satisfactory privacy policy, you might prefer to take your business elsewhere.

Keep your personal information private. Don't disclose your address, phone number, Social Security number, or e-mail address unless you know who is collecting the information, why they are collecting it, and what they plan to do with it. Be especially cautious about giving out your Social Security number. There is no reason for a retailer to have this information and you could be exposing yourself to identity theft.

If you need to create a password to order online, come up with a new one just for that site. Don't use a password that is the same as the one tied to your bank accounts or credit cards. Make something up; don't use something that can be reasonably guessed at, such as your birthday or street number. It is best to have a different password for every online site. Keep a record of the passwords away from your computer and in somewhat cryptic form.

Keep Track of Your Purchases

Online shopping is just like any other way of shopping; it involves real money. Set a budget and stick to it. The lower limit credit card suggested above would have the additional benefit of keeping you from overspending.

Research an item before you buy. Comparison-shop between sites. Remember that shipping and handling are additional costs of buying online and are often substantial. Choose the shipping method that best suits you. Understand the seller's procedures for returns and refunds.

Keep printouts of the web pages indicating the seller's name, postal address, and telephone number. Also keep printouts of the item ordered, any confirmation messages, and any other pertinent information.

Online shopping appears to be here to stay and probably will become more popular. These tips may seem like a lot to remember, but if you choose to shop online, practice will make them second nature. You'll be saving yourself time and money while protecting yourself from fraud.

Consuming Thoughts

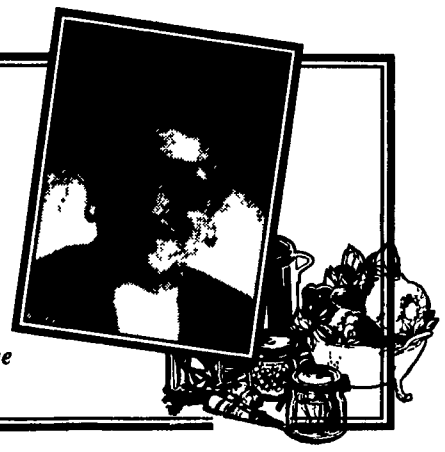
Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.



Yogurt is one food that people say "I like it or I don't like it."

If you like it there are lots of choices in the dairy case and freezer sections.

If you don't like it, you need to keep an open mind to trying recipes that have yogurt as one of the ingredients, because many times you would never guess that yogurt is in that recipe.

Yogurt opportunities in recipes are endless. Think of yogurt not only as a lunch mainstay or a healthful snack, but also as a friendly staple ingredient ready to be blended with all kinds of compatible foods–herbs, spices, condiments, sweeteners, convenience products–for healthful, delicious dining. The following are just some of the ways you can use yogurt at home to enhance your meals and increase your calcium intake every day.

- Blend 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard with 1 cup yogurt, salt, herbs and pepper to taste. Use instead of mayonnaise in dressings and on salads and sandwiches.
- Substitute plain yogurt for at least half the sour cream in your favorite dip recipes.
- Prepare yogurt cheese as described below. Add grated carrots, cucumber, bell pepper and scallions. Season salt and to taste. Makes a great sandwich or bagel spread.
- Use plain yogurt instead of milk or cream in mashed potatoes and pasta dishes; top baked potatoes with a dollop of yogurt sprinkled with chives and parsley.
- Stir yogurt into rice pilaf or cooked spinach for a middle Eastern flavor.
- Top soup or chili with a dollop of plain yogurt.
- When using yogurt in a soup, stew, or other hot dishes, add yogurt at the very end of cooking time. Yogurt will curdle if subjected to high temperatures.
- Yogurt has a delicate consistency. Gently fold; don't beat it into dishes.
- Yogurt Cheese: Line a colander with several layers of cheesecloth. Place colander over a large bowl and spoon 2 quarts of yogurt over the cheesecloth. Cover with plastic wrap. Transfer bowl and colander to the refrigerator, and allow yogurt to drain for 12-24 hours. Throw away the liquid collected in the bowl. The yogurt will thicken to a consistency of soft cream cheese, and can be used to replace it in cheesecakes, spreads, etc. Two quarts of yogurt will yield about 3 cups of yogurt cheese.

Blended Yogurt Fruit Whip Drink

5 cups vanilla low fat yogurt
10 ounce package frozen berries
2 cups 1% milk
3 large ripe bananas

Combine milk, two bananas, berries and yogurt in blender and mix until smooth. Pour drink into small cups and top with sliced banana.

Yogurt Pudding

1 cup (8 oz.) plain yogurt
1 cup low fat milk
1 small package instant vanilla pudding

Mix all ingredients together. Beat until smooth and thickened. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Can be served with fresh berries for a healthful snack.

In addition to being a delicious and versatile food, yogurt offers many nutritional benefits. It is high in protein and B vitamins, and is one of the richest sources of calcium. An eight-ounce serving provides about 300-450 mg of calcium. This high calcium content makes yogurt an ideal food choice for women and men of all ages who need calcium daily to build and maintain bone density.

Attend Farm Family Safety Day

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Kids, did you know that you are the most valuable resource your parents have?

Their most valuable resource is not their farm, the soil, the big barns or the whole herd of cows — but you.

Growing up on the farm gives you many opportunities to have fun that children off the farm don't have. Unfortunately, farming is also the most dangerous occupation. It's the place where you play. In the United States, about 104 children die annually from unintentional farm injuries and many more are hurt. In fact for each two children that die, 40 more are admitted to hospitals to treat farm injuries.

You don't want this to happen. Your parents don't want this to happen. A lot of doctors, nurses, and other concerned people want to make the farm a safer place for children.

They aren't telling your parents how to run their farms or that children shouldn't be helping on the farm. But they want to share some tips on how to prevent injuries and preserve you — their most valuable resource.

A free day of fun and safety demonstrations for the whole family is set for Saturday, April 8, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Solanco Fairgrounds, Quarryville.

Children 8 through 13 years of age will have separate training. Some activities will be provided for children under 8 years but they must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian.

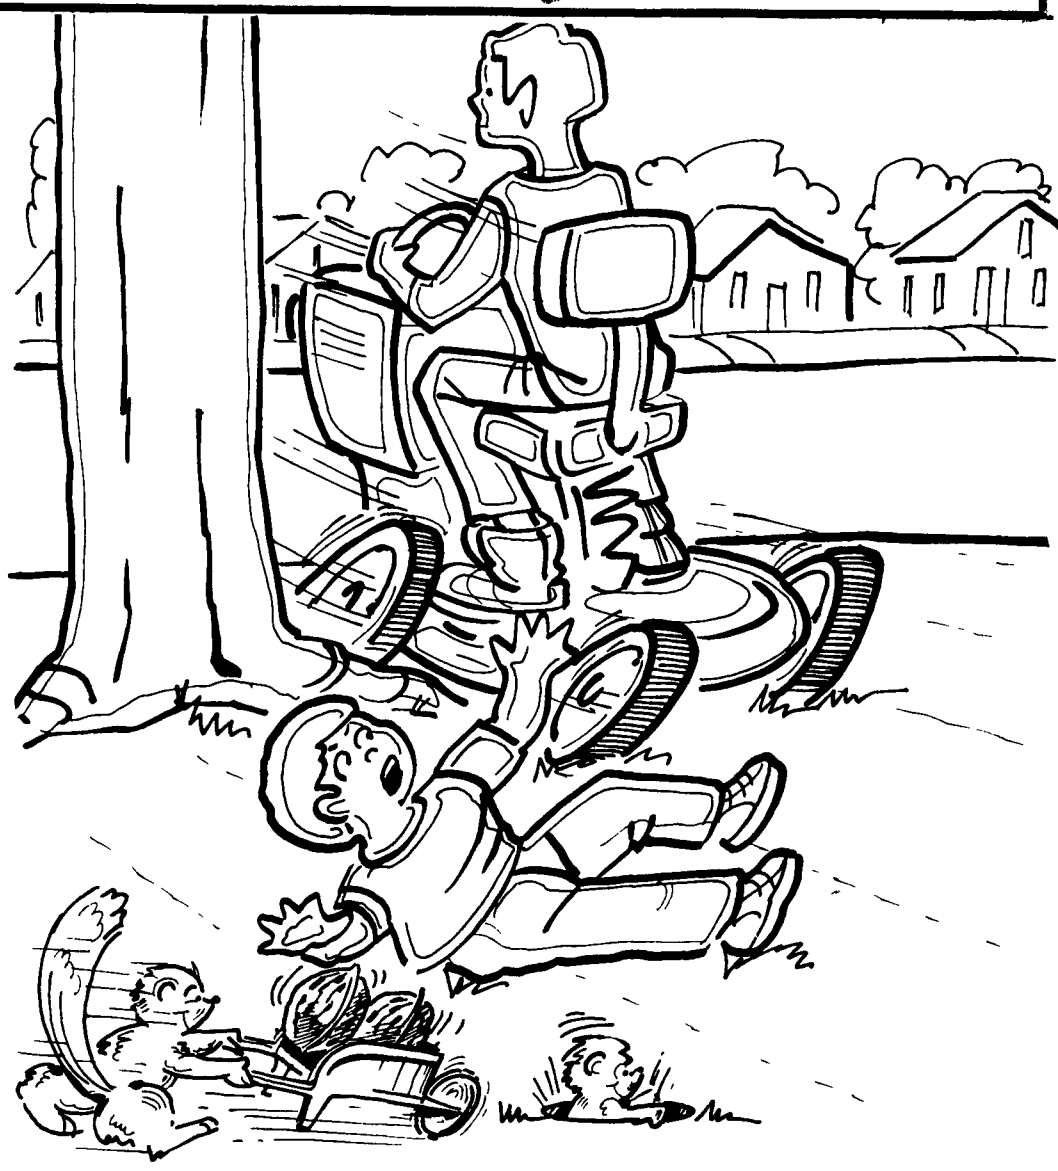
Safety topics include but are not limited to water, lawnmowers, electrical and fire safety. Even a free lunch will be provided for registered participants. Limited transportation may also be provided.

This is the sixth year the Farm Safety Day Camp will be held in Lancaster County. Usually 150-210 children attend.

It is important to register for the seminar immediately because only a limited number of children from ages 8-13 can be accommodated. Deadline for registration is March 24. No late or phone registrations will be accepted.

Fill out the form on this page and send to Southern States Coop., Inc. 1609 River Rd., Marietta, PA 17547. You will receive confirmation if you are properly registered for this event.

If you have any questions, call Southern States Cooperative, Inc. at (717) 426-1961 or 1-800-822-0769.



Billy's brother stops and starts to back up. Billy fell off but his brother can't hear him screaming.

Future College Students Explore Ag Sciences At Annual Open House

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)–Picking a college is a tough decision, and future agriculturalists, food scientists and biological researchers will get help and advice when Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences holds its seventh annual open house for prospective students on Saturday, March 18 from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Agricultural Sciences and Industries (ASI) Building on the University Park campus.

"Selecting a college is hard for anyone," said Marianne Fivek, assistant professor of agricultural and extension education and undergraduate recruitment coordinator. "It's especially confusing for a high school student who hasn't settled on clear career goals. Our Open House gives students interested in the agricultural sciences an informal, relaxed setting where they can explore their college plans. It's also an opportunity for families to visit with deans, professors, current students and other prospective students.

"Last year's Open House drew about 125 families, or around 350 people, and we were able to give them personal attention," Fivek adds. "About 50 faculty and staff from the college are there to answer questions about the agricultural sciences, and about university life. Representatives from the Ag Advocates student organization and the Ag Student Council also attend."

Attendees can learn about careers in agricultural and related fields and consider the college's 18 undergraduate majors. The event will begin with an informational fair at 8 a.m., followed by a general session at 9 a.m. and academic advising sessions at 10 a.m.

Exhibits will highlight academic departments, student organizations, ROTC, housing and food services and other aspects of university life. A special luncheon and advising session for students who already have started their education at a location other than University Park will be held at noon in 101 ASI.

Families and individual students can see college facilities and explore the campus through tours that will include food science laboratories, animal science facilities and the School of Forest Resources. A panel discussion on careers in agriculture will be held in 101 ASI Building at 1:30 p.m.

After the Open House, families can visit the University Creamery, the Penn State Bookstore, the Penn State University Libraries and the Palmer Museum of Art. Penn State Housing and Food Services will offer special meal deals for both lunch and dinner.

For more information, contact the Office for Undergraduate Education at (814) 865-7521, or send e-mail to Fivek at mafivek@psu.edu.

Dairy Of Distinction Seeks Nice Looking Farms

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy of Distinction Program of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, and Vermont is looking for you.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program that oversees the Distinction program was first started in 1983 in Pennsylvania. The Dairy of Distinction recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintain attractive farms.

The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, thus increasing sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of building, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by the farm.

The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management are all areas taken into consideration when a team of judges takes a look at your farm from the road. Your milk cooperative or handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

Judging is conducted during the month of May. Award winners are announced during local June Dairy Month activities. To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk.

Del-Jame Farm near Hamburg in Berks County is a 1999 Dairy of Distinction winner. Since the program began in 1987 in Pennsylvania, more than 700 farms have been given this farm beautification award. Entries are now being received for the year 2000 program. Take time to enter your farm now.

Applications are available for Pennsylvania dairy farms from Michael O'Conner, 324 Henning Building, Dept. of Dairy and Animal Science, Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802. Phone: (814) 863-3913.

New York State applications are available from Carol Keene-Ainsille, 3993 Jordonville Road, Jordonville, NY 13361. Phone: (315) 858-2770.

For New Jersey applications, contact Joy Ricker, 91 Beemer Road, Sussex, NJ 07461. Phone: (973) 875-4803.

For Vermont applications, send to Elisa Clancy, Vermont Department of Agriculture, 16 State Street, Drawer 20, Montpelier, VT 05620-2901. Phone: (802) 828-3835.

All applications must be completed and returned to your respective state secretary by April 15, 2000.

The Dairy of Distinction program is financed in Pennsylvania by dairy farmers through the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program in cooperation with many local agribusiness organizations. The program is conducted with advice and help from the Penn State Cooperative Extension.

HOW IS YOUR FARM SCORED?

Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program Inc.

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance, and other factors that can be controlled by the farmer. Attractive background scenery should not be weighted heavily in judging. All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway. If the farm is off the road, the judging will take place from the nearest lane. Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block.

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy products or dairy farming. Farmers who apply for the award agree that if selected they will cooperate with these promotion activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of heir properties in an acceptable manner.

HOW THE APPLICATION WORKS

The owner or operator of the dairy farm should sign the application and send it to the Dairy of Distinction state secretary by April 15.

HOW THE JUDGING WORKS

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May. Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis. Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their signs. The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer. All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent on their Dairy of Distinction score card. Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

RULES FOR THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION AWARD

1) The Dairy of Distinction sign remains property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Committee.
2) The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer. It is suggested that a wood post 4' x 4' x 12' or iron pipe 2' x 12' can be used. Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground. Top of the bracket should be lower than six inches from the top of the post.
3) Signs shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside. An attractive post or bracket, or other frame, shall be used to display the sign. No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size, and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign. Sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damages.
4) Signs shall not be moved to other premises. New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign
5) Replacement of damaged signs is at the committee's discretion.
6) No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expenses.
7) Judges' decisions will be final.
8) Judging will take place between May 1st and May 31st.
9) Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1st and April 30th. If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1st and May 31st so they have the opportunity to keep the sign.
10) Farms that do not requalify will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction committee.

Berlin-Brothersvalley FFA Salutes Top Achievers

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.)–About 245 persons at the 61st Annual Berlin-Brothersvalley FFA Banquet saluted Dennis Hay, when he was named the 45th honorary member of the chapter.

In 1971 Hay was graduated from Berlin-Brothersvalley High School where he had been both vice president and president of the local FFA, and later–1974–received the American Farmer Degree.

Hay and wife, Cheryl are parents of Jeremy and Jared, who are also active in FFA. Hay operates High Manor Farms and actively supports the Berlin Young Farmers Chapter, which led to his recognition as the Region V Outstanding Young Farmer in 1994 by the Pennsylvania Young Farmer Association.

When the FFA members begin the spring project of a portable greenhouse, Hay, a school board member donates a wagon to use for spring bedding plants.

Guest speaker Sarrah Biddle, State FFA secretary, in her address, spoke about a parallel between FFA members and the high-soaring and inspiring eagle.

Adam Coleman, Berlin-Brothersvalley FFA Chapter president, honors Dennis Hay, the 45th Honorary Member who is joined by Cheryl Hay, his wife.

"Soar with your strengths and talents and then maximize them," she said, encouragingly.

"Wherever blue corduroy is involved, awesome things will happen," she said.

Adam Coleman was the recipient of a new award called "Character Counts," which is based on trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, citizenship and fairness, exhibited by the chapter president.

Award winners in the State Agricultural Record Book Contest included David Bittner, Dairy Calves and Heifers, and Diversified Forages; Justin Lorson, On-Farm Employment; Matt Webreck, and On-Farm Employment; Morgan Dickey, Off-Farm Employment; Nathan Croner.

Seniors Spotlighted For Pennsylvania 4-H Week

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Pennsylvania will celebrate 4-H Week on March 13 through 19. The Pennsylvania 4-H membership was more than 119,000 strong in 1999, with more than 10,000 adult leaders helping with the program.

4-H offers programs for kids ages 8 to 19. These programs range from animal husbandry to clothing & textiles and even business entrepreneurship.

Penn State's mission for the 4-H program is to help young people become self-directed, productive, and contributing members of a diverse society.

To celebrate Pennsylvania 4-H Week, Lancaster Farming interviewed five 4-H senior members during last week's Adams County 4-H Senate meeting.

Those five 4-Hers are B.J. Wagner of Ortanna, Jessi Leister of Biglerville, Shannon Holtzinger of East Berlin, Tiffanie Conaway of Abbottstown, and Josh Ramsburg of Gettysburg. Here's what they had to say about 4-H.

Josh Ramsburg

Growing up on a dairy farm, Josh's career goal is to return to his father's dairy farm in Gettysburg. The son of Lee and Jane Ramsburg, Josh is a senior at Gettysburg High School and plans to attend Penn State, majoring in Dairy & Animal Science.

He is a member of both the Barlow Mt. Joy Community Club and the Adams County 4-H Dairy Club. In the dairy club, Josh has served as the president, vice president, and treasurer. He was also awarded the Melvin R. Durbrow member award.

A member of the 4-H Senate, Josh has received the Mr. Frederick J. Rarics Conservation Award and attended both the Colorado and Minnesota state exchange trips. He is also a member of his local FFA chapter, having served as both vice president and secretary.

"Since I am planning to milk cows, 4-H has taught me how to care for animals, manage a herd, and keep records," said Josh.

Having joined 4-H after falling in the footsteps of his older brother and sister, Josh soon found that 4-H had a lot to offer.

"I enjoyed showing dairy cattle and meeting people on the state exchange trips," said Josh. "4-H has taught me a lot of responsibility and skills that I wouldn't have learned otherwise."

Shannon Holtzinger

The daughter of Kevin and Karen Holtzinger, Shannon joined 4-H after watching her family show cows and participate in 4-H activities.

"I grew up around dairy cattle all of my life," said Shannon. "4-H was an experience that I wanted to try."

Shannon is a senior at Bermudian High School, where she is enrolled in college prep courses and agricultural education. She is currently the president of the Adams County 4-H Dairy Club and has served in many leadership roles for the club. She is also a member of the Adams County 4-H Sheep Club.

In 1998, Shannon was recognized as the outstanding senior member for the dairy club and has won many honors, both in and out of the show ring, with her 4-H dairy projects. She is also an active member of the Bermudian FFA Chapter and has won several awards through the FFA.

Even with all of her 4-H and FFA activities, Shannon still finds time to play basketball and run track for Bermudian, as well as fulfill work responsibilities on her parents' dairy farm.

"I enjoy the social aspect of 4-H," said Shannon. "I like showing cows with all of my friends and meeting new people."

Shannon has also gained work experience and hands-on training by working with her 4-H dairy projects.

"I have developed time management skills through 4-H," said Shannon. "I can work better with both animals and people."

According to Shannon, 4-H has helped her gain a "real-world" experience of work and responsibility. "This will benefit my future career because I am not afraid of hard work."

Tiffanie Conaway

A senior at New Oxford High School, Tiffanie is the daughter of David and Jackie Conaway. After high school, she plans to study Sports Medicine at either Messiah College or Clarion University. Her career goal is to become either a sports therapist or sports physician.

A member of the New Oxford Community Club, Tiffanie first joined 4-H because she enjoyed doing craft activities and found that 4-H had a lot to offer her.

"The learning experience is really neat," said Tiffanie. "I have most enjoyed the people I've met and the new skills I've learned through 4-H."

Tiffanie has attended two 4-H state exchange trips and participated in many different leadership roles through 4-H.

"These activities have helped me gain leadership skills," said Tiffanie. "I able to talk in front of a group of people and make friends easily."

Tiffanie's involvement in 4-H has spurred interest in other activities in both her school and community. She helps out at the guidance office and with the life skills support group. She is also the head student athletic trainer and the treasurer of Teens Need Teens in her school.

In addition to playing varsity field hockey and being active in her youth group, Tiffanie also volunteers at the Teen Care Pregnancy Center. 4-H has helped Tiffanie become a role model and provide support for many other teens in need.

Jessi Leister

Jessi is the daughter of Michael and Donna Leister. She attends Delone Catholic High School with plans to attend a four-year college studying agricultural business management.

Jessi has attended the National 4-H Congress and 4-H exchange trips. She has also been an overnight camp counselor and recreational leader. She has attended 4-H State Days for several years, being a member of the first placed air pistol team. She was also a member of the first placed potato judging team at the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

A member of the 4-H Beef Club, Jessi has served as both a teen leader and teen assistant for the Adams County 4-H Fair. Her 4-H activities have also encouraged Jessi to pursue other activities, including being crowned both the Adams County Beef Producer Queen and the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Queen.

A leader in both her local club and the county senate, Jessie has served as president and vice president of both in past years. She was also a teen leader and teen assistant for the Adams County 4-H Fair.

Winning several leadership awards, Jessi credits 4-H to helping her develop leadership skills.

"One of my favorite things about 4-H is that the kids get a lot of the responsibility in running it," said Jessi. "I have gotten to experience being a leader a lot more through it."

Jessi started in 4-H when her aunt, who was a 4-H leader, approached her about joining the club. "I'm still in 4-H because I've met a lot of people and gotten more than 100 friends through my 4-H club activities," said Jessi.

Having attended several 4-H exchange trips and traveled to many leadership conferences, Jessi has seen a lot of the United States thanks to 4-H.

"I met a lot of people through 4-H who have helped open me up," said Jessi. "I can talk to people more now than I could before I joined 4-H."

B.J. Wagner

The son of George and Sonja Wagner, B.J. is a senior at Gettysburg Area High School. After graduation, he plans to attend Penn State, majoring in agricultural engineering and minoring in Extension Education.

While being in 4-H for nine years, B.J. has found friendship, new experiences, and new skills.

"I got started in the 4-H pig club because my grandfather was a leader," said B.J. "From there, I just kept joining more things and doing more stuff."

A member of the 4-H Beef Club and Swine Club, B.J. has served as president, vice president, and treasurer for the Swine Club. He is also the current president for the Adams County 4-H Senate and the news reporter for the 4-H Beef Club.

B.J. most enjoys the traveling aspects of 4-H. He has traveled to Minnesota and Colorado with 4-H exchange trips. He also was selected to attend the Buckeye Leadership Workshop and the National 4-H Congress. He has been a 4-H camp counselor for two years and traveled to Penn State with the livestock judging team.

"I met some of my best friends through 4-H," said B.J. "I've learned leadership skills and people skills. I've learned how to keep kids involved in activities, too."

According to B.J., 4-H has helped him determine his future career. "I plan to be an ag engineer but will study extension education so I can come back and help with future 4-H activities," said B.J.

Outside of 4-H, B.J. is a member of the National Honor Society and active in his church's youth group. He participates in the church's softball team and has worked at a local orchard since he was in ninth grade.

"4-H has prepared me for the real world," said B.J. "Just because people look different doesn't mean they are different. 4-H has taught me that, even though we all have different looks and likes, we all have something that we can share and relate to others with."

ANSWER — Barbara Oldantecks wanted to know how to restore a rusted tin roof. Thanks to Phares Stoltzfus, Blain, who writes that he had one that he left a hit and run painter spray paint for $325. A year or two later the rust was showing through. Stoltzfus purchased five gallons of asphalt base aluminum paint for $35 and put it on a dairy barn where silage blowing over it from silo filling caused it to rust. It didn't last either. He then paid $75 for five gallons of Cen-Pe-Co, but found it was a heavy paint and required at least 30 gallons to paint the roof, which would cost $450. A new roof costs approximately $50 per square, which means $3,150 for new tin plus labor on his barn. Compared to that, Oldantecks might be better off to hire labor to paint on Cen-Pe-Co unless she has some good friends who would volunteer to paint it. In Perry County, Cen-Pe-Co is sold by representative Steve Lightner 789-4559.

ANSWER — For W. D. Haagen, who requested the goat song, music for the words are available from Ada Krone, 10555 Foust Rd., Glen Rock, PA 17327-8326.

With Roundup TVP™ Rewards

In growing your crop, you give it your best. From warehousing your seed, planting it, controlling the weeds...it gets your hard efforts all the way through harvest. But you can't predict the unexpected. You can, however, protect yourself with the Roundup TVP™ Rewards program. Your Roundup Ready® and YieldGard® technology is backed by it. And you won't find a more comprehensive package of benefits through any competitor. It's valuable protection and savings in time of unforeseen circumstances.

Catastrophic Seed Loss Refund – If your warehoused qualifying Monsanto seed* is lost before planting due to theft, fire, flood or other natural disaster, you can qualify for a full refund of the cost of the Technology/Seed Premium paid for the seed.

Replant/Crop Loss Refund – If your qualifying Monsanto technology crop is destroyed for any reason before August 31, 2000, you can qualify for a waiver of the cost of the Technology/Seed Premium charged on your replanted crop or a full refund of the Technology/Seed Premium paid for the seed.

Replant Burndown Refund – If a qualifying Monsanto herbicide burndown treatment was applied to the field in which an approved Replant/Crop Loss Refund claim occurred, you may also qualify for a Replant Burndown Refund of up to 24 oz./A of Roundup Ultra® herbicide to apply as a burndown treatment for the replanted crop.

Premium Performance Plan – If you follow the Roundup TVP Rewards recommendations and experience an unexpected flush of annual weeds prior to canopy closure (in Roundup Ready® soybeans) or prior to reaching the V8 stage or 30 in. (in Roundup Ready® corn), you'll receive up to 24 oz./A of Roundup Ultra herbicide at no charge.

We stand behind our technology, and we'll stand behind you. With Roundup TVP Rewards. Because, for your investment and your valuable business, you deserve to be rewarded.

Always read and follow label directions. Roundup brand herbicides will kill plants that do not contain the Roundup Ready® gene. See Monsanto Technology Use Guide for recommended agronomic practices and specific Roundup TVP Rewards™ program requirements and eligibility. *Roundup Ready® soybean seed sold by Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc. qualifies for the Premium Performance Plan and Replant Burndown Refund portions of Roundup TVP Rewards upon grower registration for Roundup TVP Rewards™ benefits. YieldGard® corn seed sold by Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc. and NK® brand seed sold by Novartis Seeds, Inc. do not qualify for Roundup TVP Rewards. Regulatory approvals of grain/commodities harvested from Roundup Ready® corn and Roundup Ready® & YieldGard® corn stacked are pending in certain export markets and may not be received before the end of 2000. As a result the Grower is restricted from introducing such grain/commodities into channels of trade where the potential for export to such markets exists. The Grower must channel such grain/commodities for feeding on farm, use in domestic feedlots or other uses in domestic markets only. Life is Better When You Buy Recycled

Don't get the wrong idea. We would never presume to imply you will always bowl a 300 game or win the lottery if you buy recycled. Our entertaining TV commercials, which you also can view on our website are designed to make you laugh as you learn more about the many benefits that accrue from recycling.

In fact, recycling will improve our lives– especially if we complete the cycle by buying products made of recycled materials.

For one thing, reprocessing used materials to make new products and packaging reduces the consumption of natural resources.

For another, recycling often produces better products than those made of virgin materials. For instance, the tin in bimetallic cans is more refined—and therefore more valuable—after being processed for recycling.

So, purchase products with the highest percentage of "post-consumer" content—items, such as paper, bottles, tires, cans and newspaper, which have first been used by the consumer and then recycled.

How will you know if you are buying products containing recycled content? Just read the package label! The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has issued guidelines to help reduce consumer confusion and prevent false or misleading use of environmental terms in product advertising and labeling. The term "recyclable" includes the reuse, reconditioning and remanufacturing of products or parts in another product. Similarly, "recycled content" includes products and packages that contain reused, reconditioned or remanufactured materials, as well as recycled raw material. If advertisers use the term "recycled" to describe a product that has been reused, reconditioned or remanufactured, they must disclose that the product has been recycled through reuse, etc.—unless that fact is clear from the context.

So, be an environmental shopper. Reduce, reuse and recycle. And if you think that as an individual you can have little effect on the world's staggering environmental problems, think again. There are things the individual can control. Waste reduction, recycling and reuse can make a difference.

Take it from us—and from the happy actors in our entertaining ads. Buying recycled is the right thing to do. And it feels so good!

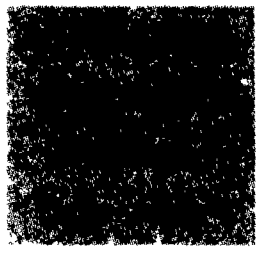
The Cycle in Recycling

There's a cycle in recycling.
It entails more than separating paper, plastic, metal and glass. More than putting them out at the curb or taking them to recycling centers. More than having your town collect them. More than making products out of them.

Recycling entails buying products made from recycled materials.

That's the cycle in recycling.
When you shop, check the label for post-consumer recycled content. You can buy cereal, crackers and shoes in boxes made from recycled paper. Some household cleaners, dishwashing liquids, shampoos and other products can be found in bottles made of recycled content. You can buy toilet paper and facial tissue made from recycled paper. Paper towels are made with recycled content, as are writing paper, envelopes and greeting cards.



Even when you're not aware of it, you might be buying products with recycled content.

About half of the aluminum in beverage cans comes from used cans that were recycled and melted to make new cans.

Nearly one quarter of the glass in bottles and jars has been used before.

About one quarter of the content of "tin" cans actually is recycled steel.

Gray or brown cardboard egg cartons, fruit trays and flower pots are made from recycled paper that is repulped and reshaped.

Making products out of recyclable materials, which have already been refined and processed, has substantial environmental advantages over the creation of products from virgin materials.

So, buying products made from recycled materials is an easy way to help reduce the environmental impact of the products you use. Sorting. Collecting. Producing. Buying. What goes around comes around.

That's the cycle in recycling.

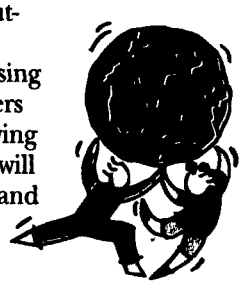
FAMILY MATTERS

Kidz Korner

Earthshaking News for Kids

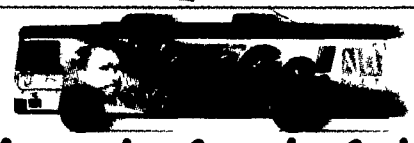
You would be surprised at the variety of ways you can help save the Earth. Here are just a few:

1 Gather up old toys, books, games and puzzles that you don't want or use anymore and find places that can use them, like hospitals and libraries. Or have a garage sale. The things you've outgrown are still valuable. By passing them on to others instead of throwing them away, you will make less trash and save precious resources.



2 Don't dump harmful liquids on the ground on purpose. The earth is like a sponge that soaks everything in. Dumping even common, everyday things on the ground will pollute groundwater.

3 Plant flowers, trees or shrubs in your backyard. It's a great way to provide food for the birds, butterflies and other creatures that live near you. Or start a brush pile with bushes and branches for small animals to use as "cover." If they know they can hide themselves when they need to, they're more likely to visit you.



'way to Go, VanGo!

The Susquehanna Art Museum's new VanGo! museum on wheels is on the road, touring the state with original art made from found objects and assembled from renewable materials.

The exhibit, entitled ReUSE, ReNEW!, is designed to teach students about recycling, urban management and conservation.

VanGo! is a retrofitted bus that brings original works of art to sites across Pennsylvania, visiting schools, community groups and just about any place where people request "the art museum that comes to you."

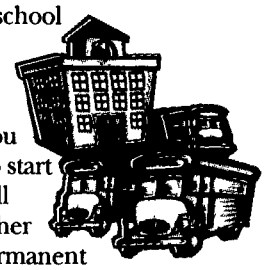
This latest exhibit reflects the growing interest and concern about the environment by today's artists. Many of them are increasingly voicing their fears about environmental abuse by using found objects as a statement about the importance of recycling and valuing our earth.

These artists, who have organized into groups such as "the dumpster divers," are attemptung to spur environmental awareness through their unique works.

For further information on VanGo! or to schedule a visit to your area call 717-233-8668.

Is your school pulling its weight?

If your school already recycles office paper, corrugated paper and aluminum—good for you! If it also recycles materials such as glass, newsprint, plastics, steel and bimetallic cans, and leaf waste, even better!



But if your school does not have a recycling program yet, you should help start one. You will need a teacher or other permanent school employee to serve as recycling coordinator, but there are a lot of things you, the students, can do to get a program up and running successfully. Call 800-346-4242 today!

Help for a Healthy Home

In every home, large or small, new or old, city or country, there are potential risks to your family's health and the environment. Home-A-Syst, a cost-effective, state-operated, national pollution prevention program, helps you identify these risks.

Home-A-Syst begins with a checklist of questions to identify problem areas:

- How safe is your drinking water?
- Do you use hazardous household products safely?
- Is there lead-based paint in your home?

Then, when you find potential concerns, Home-A-Syst can help you develop an action plan to reduce the risks.

In Pennsylvania, contact Home-A-Syst State Coordinator Cathy Bowen at cbowen@psu.edu or call 814-863-1614.

Just use less...

You can reduce the amount of trash you make simply by buying products that are reusable, refillable or concentrated.

Take a look through your trash. Identify what you are throwing away.

Here are some other helpful hints:

- Use a sponge rather than paper towels.
- Buy concentrates
- Buy fresh produce without packaging
- Avoid double-bagging
- Avoid single-use products.
- Repair, rather than replace, broken items
- Donate unwanted materials to charity.
- Have your name removed from junk mailing lists

"Growing Greener"

Watershed Grants Now Available

On behalf of Gov. Tom Ridge, Department of Environmental Protection Secretary James M. Seif announced DEP is accepting applications for watershed protection and restoration grants authorized by the Growing Greener Initiative.

"With the new year comes a new opportunity to help restore and protect watersheds all over Pennsylvania through the funding made available by the Growing Greener Initiative," said Seif. "Hundreds of communities and watershed groups are eligible for the new watershed-grants."

"DEP's new one-page watershed grant application eliminates much of the old paperwork involved in applying for a grant," said Seif. "The new digital signature legislation signed by Gov. Ridge now allows us to accept grant applications online for the first time through DEP's website, eliminating the paperwork altogether."

Counties, local governments, authorities, conservation districts, watershed associations and other nonprofit groups involved in watershed restoration are eligible to apply.

The new grants can fund a wide variety of watershed projects, including installing stream buffers, fencing streams, treating or eliminating acid mine drainage, restoring wetlands, reclaiming abandoned mines, watershed assessments and education programs.

For more information visit DEP's website at www.dep.state.pa.us (choose Growing Greener Grant Center) to get an application, instructions, see sample applications or to apply online.

An application packet can also be requested by sending your name, postal address and phone number by e-mail to:

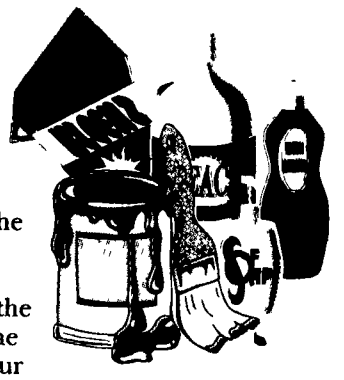
The ABCs of HHW

Don't dispose of household hazardous wastes (HHW) – those wastes produced from things like paint, pesticides, and cleaning products – down the drain or in your yard.



When using dangerous substances, buy and use only the amount needed for the task. Do not pour excess HHW down the drain or in the trash. Call your local recycling coordinator for instructions on the proper disposal of your household hazardous waste.

Call the HHW hotline at 800-346-4242 for specific disposal information.

For more information on HHW visit the DEP website (directLINK "HHW").

HOT IDEAS! COOL TIPS!

FOR HOUSE & HOME

Here's a Bright Idea

Replace all light fixtures that operate four or more hours a day with ones that use fluorescent bulbs to save money and energy. Use lumens—the amount of light produced—to compare lights. For example, a 23-watt fluorescent bulb produces about the same number of lumens as a 100-watt incandescent. Your investment will generally pay for itself in a couple of years.

Food for Thought

Since the kitchen uses a big chunk of your home energy budget—the refrigerator alone accounts for about 15% of the total home electricity bill or about 10% of the average home energy bill—try these energy efficient techniques:

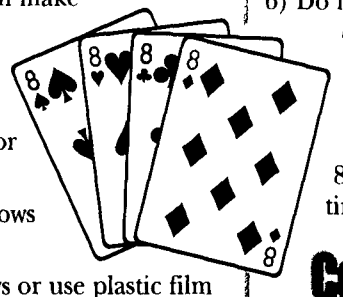
- Buy a refrigerator that is the right size for your needs to avoid wasting energy cooling nothing.
- Use a microwave or toaster oven to cook small portions and a conventional oven or stove-top for larger items.
- A watched pot will indeed boil—eventually—but putting a lid on it reduces cooking time and energy use.

It's a Breeze

The average home has enough leaks around its windows and doors to equal one open 3 foot by 3 foot window! Wow what a draft this would let in! So check your roof, walls, floors, windows and doors. If you deal with air leaks first, you'll get the maximum savings from your heating and cooling systems.

Not so Crazy Eights

Here are 8 energy conscious improvements you can make at home:



1) Insulate attic and exterior walls.
2) Caulk between door frames and walls.
3) Weatherstrip windows and doors.
4) Add storm windows or use plastic film kits to improve windows.
5) Insulate hot water heater.
6) Replace dangerous, inefficient halogen torchiere lamps with Energy Star torchieres.
7) Plant trees to shelter your home from the elements.
8) Get a home energy rating and an energy-efficient mortgage to finance upgrades.

And 8 energy conscious tips you can adopt:

1) Clean furnace and air conditioner filters.
2) Turn off lights when you leave a room.
3) Use sunlight for light or heat whenever practical.
4) Match pot size to burner size and keep the lid on it.
5) Set hot water heater no higher than 120°F.
6) Do laundry in cold or warm water.
7) Use computer Energy Star sleep feature and turn off office and other equipment when not in use for some time.
8) Keep your car tuned up and its tires properly inflated.

Coming Clean

In the market for new appliances? Look for these efficient, energy-saving features:

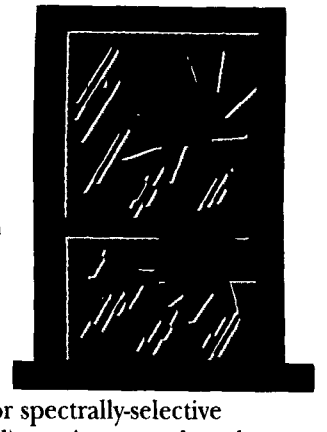
- Dishwashers that turn off the heating element and circulate air from outside the washer for drying.
- Clothes dryers that have moisture sensors that turn off the unit when the clothes are dry.
- Horizontal axis (front loading) washers that use less water and energy to get clothes as clean as conventional washers.

R Rated Advice

Appropriate insulation for your climate, based on R-Ratings, can increase your comfort and reduce your heating and cooling costs up to 30%. Start with attic insulation followed by exterior and basement walls, floors and crawl spaces.

Pane Management

If you're shopping for new windows, glass doors or skylights, look for the Energy Star label. Today's high-efficiency windows are three to four times more energy efficient than windows commonly installed 10 years ago. Special low-e (emissivity) or spectrally-selective (solar control) coatings greatly reduce the amount of heat that flows through glass so there isn't as much heat lost in winter or gained in summer.



Beware Radon

Radon, the second leading cause of lung cancer, can be detected through inexpensive testing and, if a problem is found, it can be fixed easily. Call 1-800-23RADON.

Septic Care

Is your family safe from soil and water contamination? Have your septic tank pumped out every 3 to 5 years—or more frequently if required by local regulations. Call your township or borough for ideas.

How to Save H2O

Replace conventional plumbing fixtures, fittings and appliances with water saving equipment. You'd be surprised how much water you can save.

Flood Insurance

Homeowners' and renters' policies do not cover damages from floods. Ask a licensed agent about flood insurance for damages from flooding of normally dry land. Call 888-CALLFLOOD.

Never Too Old

Are you 55 or over? Join the Pennsylvania Senior Environment Corps, part of a national group of senior volunteers for the environment. Call 717-787-9580 or visit the DEP website (directLINK "Senior Environment Corps").

The Milky Bay

Some milk cartons in Pennsylvania now bear an "Environmental Quality Initiative" seal. It means the milk came from a farm helping to prevent runoff into the Chesapeake Bay. Five cents per half gallon will go to reward farmers.

Septic & Stink

Great ways to clean without hurting the environment

Many everyday products contain hazardous substances that are dangerous to the environment and to our health when used improperly. Read labels to find out if products are hazardous. And don't dispose of them with other household trash or pour down the drain. Either use them up, give them to someone else who will, or take them to a household hazardous waste (HHW) collection site. Better yet, use homemade cleaning products. They often match the power of toxic products but are no threat to your family or to the environment. Here are some suggestions:

Moths: Use cedar chips, lavender flowers or aromatic herbs and spices. Ants: Sprinkle boric acid along the line of entry.

Roaches: Set out a dish with equal parts sugar and baking soda. Mice: Use mousetraps or get a cat. Fleas: Feed your pet brewers yeast and garlic. Bathe dogs regularly and use a flea comb on cats and dogs. Sprinkle pets' beds with fennel, rue or rosemary.

Aluminum: Rub pots with lemon juice. Rinse or soak overnight in vinegar and water. For tough stains, fill the pot with three spoons of vinegar to a pint of water and boil until all stains loosen. Copper: To polish, use ketchup or lemon juice and salt. Chrome: Shine with vinegar. Stainless steel: Water & baking soda paste.

Bleach: 1/2 cup white vinegar, baking soda or borax per load. Detergent: Always use laundry detergents with low or no phosphates. Or use soap powders or washing soda. Stain removers: Rub a moistened bar of plain, uncolored, unscented soap on stain before laundering.

Cat's litter pan: Empty and rinse. Sprinkle small amount of borax into bottom of pan. Add 1/2 inch of water and drop of mint extract. Scour with scrub brush. Empty and wipe thoroughly.

Pet urine: Mix borax, water and white vinegar. Apply to soiled area. Rinse and allow to dry.

Rug cleaner. Use soda water or a paste made from baking soda and water. Vacuum when dry. Red wine stains: Cover liquid with salt. Let dry, then vacuum. Rug deodorizer: Mix two parts cornmeal with one part borax, spread evenly over rug, vacuum after one hour. Or sprinkle plain baking soda on rug, then vacuum. Wood: Mix 1/2 cup white vinegar or lemon juice with 2 cups olive/vegetable oil. Stir well. Rub on surface and buff with clean, dry cloth. Linoleum: Apply vinegar and water.

Heavy smudges: Mix 2 tbsps cornstarch, 1/2 cup ammonia, 1/2 cup vinegar, 1 gallon warm water. Everyday cleaning: Use 3 tbsps vinegar/lemon juice and 1 quart water in a spray bottle. Dry with fresh cloth. Extra sparkle: Polish with newspaper when nearly dry. Use lemon juice for greasy fingerprints.

Silver. Soak in an aluminum foil-lined aluminum pan filled with 1-1/2 quarts hot water, 1/2 tbsp. baking soda and 1/2 tbsp. salt. Gold: Wash with warm water and soap. China and fine glassware: Add 1 cup vinegar to sink of warm water. Dip glass or china in solution and let dry. Cutting boards: Sprinkle baking soda on a damp sponge, scrub and rinse to clean and deodorize. Oven: Apply to oven surface 1 cup baking soda mixed with enough water to make paste. Scrub with scouring pad. Dishwasher: Sprinkle handful of baking soda on dishes or in bottom of dishwasher to absorb odors until you can run a full load.

They're Energized!

Now you can have your cake and eat it, too! Or at least you can have new things without necessarily relegating existing things to the trash heap!

More and more products are being manufactured in Pennsylvania from recycled materials. In Pittsburgh, for instance, Eccleardt Productions Inc. makes creative apparel and fashion accessories like the handbag at left, out of recycled bicycle inner tubes. Hatbags are made out of truck inner tubes and decorated with authentic license plates.

Belts, too, are made of truck inner tubes as well as authentic seatbelt buckles and decorated with beer or soda bottle caps.

Products made in Pennsylvania of recycled materials are practical as well. Phoenix Recycled Plastics of Conshohocken, for instance, makes plastic pumber for use in like patio and garden furniture.

Unlike their wooden counterparts, such furniture, like the garden bench pictured here, never needs painting, never has splinters and will not fade.

Tyreplex Corp. in Downingtown uses tires to manufacture products such as the bucket seen here, as well as trash cans and road safety cones.

Bits & Pieces

Mine Insurance

Damage due to mine subsidence is not usually covered by your homeowner's insurance policy. But DEP offers Mine Subsidence Insurance for homeowners who live over or near areas that have been mined.

The annual premium for residential coverage is about $1 for every $1,000 of coverage. The policies are for one year and are renewable annually. Only complete buildings and buildings under construction can be insured; driveways, sidewalks, fences and the like are not covered.

Coverage is available from a minimum of $5,000 to a maximum of $150,000 with a $250 deductible for a residential structure; and up to $250,000 with a $500 deductible for a nonresidential structure. A structure cannot be insured for more than its market value, and DEP recommends insurance coverage for at least 80% of the market value of the structure.

For more information or to purchase insurance, contact DEP at 800-922-1678.

Ahh! What a Releaf!

The Pennsylvania Stream Releaf initiative is designed to help communities, watershed groups, farmers and citizens plant trees along stream banks. These stream buffers help prevent nonpoint source pollution runoff.

The program offers a toolkit that provides step-by-step instructions on how to plant trees and shrubs, what species to plant in specific areas, strategies for organizing groups to participate and contacts for more information.

To contact the Stream Releaf program, call 877-PA GREEN.

Got a Guide? Get One!

Now you can get an easy-to-understand guide that can help you determine if your business needs a DEP permit, what kind of permit it needs and where you can go for help.

Almost all DEP permits are issued through the department's six regional offices or six district mining offices. These offices will assist you in identifying needed permits and coordinating permit and license procedures.

Before applying, you should contact DEP to schedule a pre-application conference. These meetings improve the communication between potential applicants and DEP staff and often result in improved applications and a better understanding of the project by DEP.

For more information or to obtain a copy of the DEP permit guide, contact DEP at 717-783-8303.

Free Site Visits

Businesses large and small are eligible for DEP Pollution Prevention/Energy Efficiency (P2/E2) site visits to identify ways to lower costs by reducing waste.

The voluntary, non-regulatory visits for companies without major unresolved compliance issues are intended to increase productivity and enhance Pennsylvania's environment by identifying opportunities to conserve energy and resources, to prevent product loss and to avoid creation of waste/emissions.

For more information or to schedule a visit, contact DEP at 717-783-9981 or visit the DEP website (directLINK "site visits").

Pennsylvania's Citizens Volunteer Monitoring Program (CVMP) helps both organizations and individuals who are concerned about water quality plan for the future and share resources.

Nearly 6,000 Pennsylvanians voluntarily monitor a variety of surface and groundwater resources such as rivers, streams, lakes, ponds, wetlands, estuaries, beaches and wells. Monitoring groups spend more than $2 million a year throughout the state to learn more about the health of our waterways

'Tis a Farm, Farm Better Thing You Do...

Pennsylvania is a land of great natural resources and Pennsylvania's farmers have always worked as stewards of the land to improve and protect those resources. The Pennsylvania Conservation Catalog is available to help farmers with ideas. The catalog identifies practices that assist in reducing soil erosion and enhancing and protecting water quality, while protecting farming as a way of life.

Local county conservation districts also can provide one-on-one technical assistance. Districts serve a range of agricultural and urban interests and participate in a wide variety of resource programs. They meet monthly and welcome the involvement of local citizens.

For more information on the catalog, contact your local conservation district by looking in the blue pages of your phone book under county government.

WHAT'RE YOU DOING TO SAVE WATER?

Believe it or not, our water resources are not unlimited! Since Pennsylvanians have access to abundant water much of the time, we usually don't think about how much water we use.

But that attitude simply doesn't wash. In 1900, each of the 6 million people living in Pennsylvania used about 5 gallons of water per day. Since then, our population has doubled to almost 12 million people, and our water consumption has increased to an average of 50 gallons per person per day!

Because water is a resource that must be shared, conservation is essential. Although our water resources are affected every day by precipitation, population growth, economic development and pollution, there are things we all can do to conserve water. Here are some tips:

- Awareness is the first step in conservation. Be aware of how much water you use.
- Install fixtures and appliances that use less water.
- Repair all drips and leaks. A leaking toilet, for instance, can waste up to 200 gallons per day!
- Do not let the faucet flow while brushing your teeth or shaving. Use a glass of water for rinsing teeth.
- Take showers instead of tub baths.
- Refrigerate a bottle of drinking water instead of letting a faucet flow until the water is cold enough to drink.
- Operate the washing machine and dishwasher only when they are fully loaded. Always use the proper water level or load size selection on the washing machine.

COMMUNITY ACTION

TIRED OF PILES OF TIRES?
Spin into action

Scrap tires present a number of environmental, health and safety hazards to the public, and represent a serious public nuisance. Some 12 million scrap tires are generated each year in Pennsylvania– about one per person– and about 20 million scrap tires remain in large stockpiles throughout the state, although some 17 million tires have been cleaned up within the past four years.

Tire piles can create environmental and health hazards. Rainwater accumulates in them, creating an ideal environment for mosquitoes, which transmit disease. And tire piles have a tendency to catch fire. A massive tire fire under a major highway in Philadelphia cost millions of dollars in damage and affected hundreds of thousands of commuters and businesses in the region for months. Large tire fires also can burn for weeks, causing the rubber to decompose into oil, which can pollute ground and surface water, as well as produce gas and carbon black.

Do your part to minimize the rate of scrap tire generation.

In 1996, Governor Tom Ridge signed the Waste Tire Recycling Act, which provides grants, tax credits and enforcement/ penalty provisions to reduce the waste tires that are stockpiled and generated annually in Pennsylvania. It prohibits the improper disposal of waste tires in landfills, establishes Waste Tire Pile Remediation grants, which provide up to $1 million annually for 5 years to remediate tire piles across Pennsylvania, and establishes equipment and infrastructure investment tax credits for Pennsylvania businesses and individuals who use waste tires.

Although DEP has identified potential markets for well over 12 million per year, markets tend to develop slowly, and there are some 20 million scrap tires already stored in tire piles or dumped illegally throughout the state. So it is important to minimize the rate at which they are generated.

What can you do to extend the life of your tires? Four words:

- Rotation: Rotate tires as recommended by manufacturer to ensure all four tires wear at a relatively uniform rate.
- Inflation: Improper inflation is considered the #1 factor in excessive tire wear and premature failure.
- Balance: Improper tire balancing contributes to tread separation and accelerated wear.
- Alignment: Improper wheel alignment results in excessive wear on either the outer or inner edge of a tire.

If cared for properly, one set of tires could outlast two cars!

Some 20 million tires are illegally dumped and stockpiled in Pennsylvania. You can help change that.

Don't let rain water WASH AWAY YOUR GOOD INTENTIONS

DEP provides grant money to counties to develop storm water management plans for designated watersheds.

This planning effort results in the incorporation of sound engineering standards and criteria into local codes and ordinances to manage runoff from new development in a coordinated, watershed-wide approach.

Counties develop stormwater plans for each of the watersheds within their boundaries. DEP develops grant agreements with counties to pay for 75 percent of the cost to prepare the plans.

Upon completion of a plan by a county and approval by the department, municipalities located in the watershed adopt ordinances consistent with the plan.

Developers are then required to follow the local drainage regulations that incorporate the standards of the watershed plan when preparing their land development plan.

For more information contact DEP at 717-787-5267 or visit the DEP website (directLINK "stormwater").

Oil's well that ends well

Do you change your own motor oil? If you are among the many do-it-yourself oil changers in Pennsylvania, here's what you need to know about the safe disposal of oil:

Used motor oil can pollute our environment. It may contain toxic substances such as lead, benzene and zinc and is not removed from the sewage treated at wastewater treatment plants. Some plants even use processes that can create additional pollutants from the chemicals in used oil.

In fact, used oil that is dumped improperly accounts for 40%—the largest single source—of oil pollution in our nation's waterways. In Pennsylvania alone, do-it-yourself oil changers dispose of 11 million gallons of used oil each year, but only 14% of it is recycled. The rest is dumped into sewers, on the ground or into the trash.

If all the oil generated by do-it-yourself oil changers in Pennsylvania were recycled, it would save 103,000 barrels of oil per day. That could produce enough energy to power 17,100 homes a year. Used oil filters should be recycled, too!

You can help protect the environment and save resources by taking your used oil to one of the many collection sites that have volunteered to accept used oil from the public.

Call the Pennsylvania Recycling Hotline at 800-346-4242 to find the one nearest to you.

Just for farmers

FARM-A-SYST is a cost-effective, state-operated, national pollution prevention program for farms that turns environmental assessments into action. A partnership between government and the private sector, the program overcomes such barriers to voluntary action as disconnected programs and policies, inaccessible legal and ethical standards and management strategies that work in factories but not on farms.

The FAS formula of eduction, self-assessment and action plans motivates rural residents to take voluntary action. Fact sheets pull together legal and technical requirements into a format that non-experts can understand. Step-by-step worksheets enable individuals to apply site-specific management practices to their own properties.

Color your office GREEN

Office buildings that meet their occupants' present and future needs without compromising energy efficiency, sustainable building strategies, telecommunications capabilities, occupant health, comfort, productivity and flexibility are called "green buildings." They benefit owners and managers because they attract a broad range of tenants who are interested in state-of-the-art technologies and their employees' health, quality of life and productivity.

They benefit tenants because all of their facilities and services are in tip-top order so indoor air quality, environmental programs, wire management systems and building infrastructures are superior. And they benefit the environment because they use fewer natural resources, produce less pollution and recycle the majority of the resources they use.

For more information about green buildings, contact DEP at 877-PAGREEN. Or visit www.dep.state.pa.us (directLINK "green buildings").

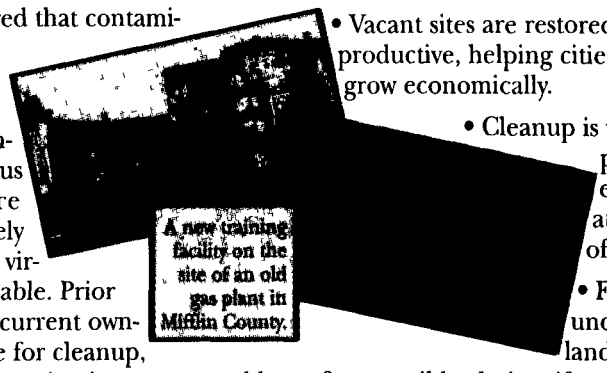
BUILDING A BETTER TOMORROW

Land Recycling Benefits Everyone

DEP's Land Recycling Program is a partnership among local businesses, government, financial institutions and DEP to restore contaminated sites to safe and productive uses.

It also promotes the creation of jobs and economic stimuli to distressed communities.

The three-year-old program marks a new direction for environmental efforts Prior policies required that contaminated sites be restored to "pristine" conditions—a standard so rigorous that compliance was prohibitively expensive and virtually unattainable. Prior laws also held current owners responsible for cleanup, even if the contamination was caused by previous owners.



A new training facility on the site of an old gas plant in Mifflin County.

The current law, however, while still focusing on producing the desired environmental result—cleanups—provides significant economic benefits to communities. Here's how:

The Land Recycling Program identifies risk-based standards for cleanup, simplifies the approval process and limits future liability when cleanup standards are achieved. In addition, it provides grants and loans to help finance environmental assessments and site cleanups.

Many sites that have been abandoned as companies ceased operations have redevelopment potential. Municipalities and individual companies are interested in restoring sites to usable condition.

Here are the benefits of land recycling at a glance:

- Cleaning up polluted industrial sites protects human health.
- Pennsylvania's environment is cleaner and safer.
- Vacant sites are restored and become productive, helping cities and towns to grow economically.
- Cleanup is voluntary and privately funded—not done at the expense of taxpayers.
- Farmers with undeveloped land need not face possible choices if contamination is found on their farms.
- Farmland and greenspace are saved from development.
- Changing our practices now will sharply reduce new abandoned sites in the future.

To get involved in the Land Recycling Program, contact DEP at 717-783-7816.

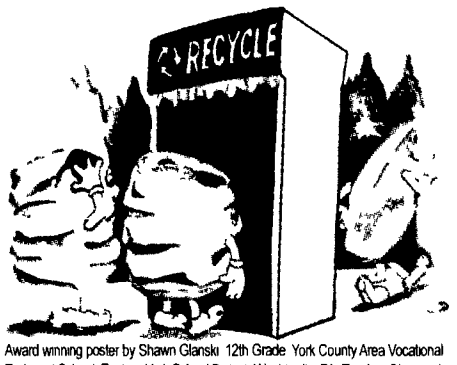
✂ CLIP & SAVE

Don't trash recycling

Whenever you buy overpackaged or disposable products, you are essentially buying trash. You can prevent a lot of that not just by recycling but by reducing your purchases of disposable and overpackaged items and reusing more of what you already have.



Award winning poster by Shawn Glanski 12th Grade York County Area Vocational Technical School Eastern York School District Wrightsville PA Teacher Therese Lauks

You can help the environment both "downstream," when products are disposed of, and "upstream," when they are manufactured.

By not using unnecessary products or packaging, we don't just avoid having to send it to landfills or incinerators. We also avoid having to expend the energy, consume the natural resources and create the pollution that comes from manufacturing it in the first place!

You Can Have An Impact On Society- Litter-ally!

Randomly discarded trash, even the smallest of items, endangers our environment, our wildlife and our economy.

It pollutes our territory, decreases our property values and wastes our tax dollars

Litter can be a serious problem unless everyone works together to prevent it.

HERE'S WHAT YOU CAN DO TO HELP:

Cover trash receptacles tightly.

Always clean up after an outdoor activity.

Carry a litter bag in your vehicle—and use it!

Always dispose of trash in a proper receptacle.

Teach your children to dispose of trash properly.

Never throw anything from your vehicle windows.

Secure your load if you carry loose materials in a truck.

SCRAPS

A ton of paper made from 100% recycled paper saves the equivalent of:

- 4,100 kwh energy
- 7,000 gallons of water
- 60 pounds of air emissions
- 3 cubic yards of landfill space

- The iron and steel (tin cans) Americans throw away every day could continuously supply all our nation's auto makers.
- $10 billion was spent in the US to dispose of trash in 1990.
- Americans throw away enough aluminum cans every 3 months to rebuild the entire US commercial air fleet.
- 5 million homes could be heated for 200 years with the wood and paper thrown away in the US each year.
- Packaging accounts for almost half of the municipal solid waste disposed in the US today.

- Recycling 1 glass bottle saves enough energy to light a 100-watt bulb for 4 hours.
- Reusing 1 ton of paper will save enough energy to heat:
  ...an average home for 6 months
  ...7,000 gallons of water
  ...380 gallons of oil
  ...3 cubic yards of landfill space.
- Making 1 aluminum can out of raw materials requires 10 times the amount of energy that it takes to recycle 1 can.

A Look At Strawberry Plasticulture

Bob Rouse
Wye Research and Extension Center
University of Maryland
Queenstown, Md.

One of the main reasons strawberry plasticulture has caught on and has been successful for a number of Mid-Atlantic growers is that they are good direct marketers.

It's true that Maryland growers cannot get the yields with Chandler or Sweet Charlie that you are able to get in many parts of the Carolinas but gross return is based on two factors. Yield is only one of them. The other is price. So yield times price equals gross return minus expenses equals profits, we hope. So if a grower gets half the yield and is able to sell it at twice the price, the grower has the same gross return as those who have twice the yield at half the price.

What got my attention in annual strawberry plasticulture a number of years ago was that it seemed to be the answer to a number of problems that matted row strawberries just could not overcome–lack of herbicides, sap beetle, small berry size, sandy berries, etc. But could it be done profitably?

What kept my attention was a number of growers who direct market their picked berries. Two in particular forced us to keep experimenting: One, an organic grower who six years ago grew his first crop. He sold it by the pint–$1.60 wholesale, $2 retail. The other, a conventional grower, showed up at the city farmer's market with 900 quarts of pretty Chandler. He was next to another direct tailgate marketer who had some small matted row June berries. If I remember right, the June berries were priced at $2.50 a quart. He priced his larger Chandlers at $3 and was sold out in two and one half hours.

Needless to say, when you farm in the city shadow you need to provide the best from the top of the box to the bottom. As L.L. Bean used to say, "Provide the customer with good quality merchandise at a fair price, treat them right and they will be back again."

Stand by your product, be willing to put your name on it, and solve customer complaints. You want to keep them coming back to your farm or stand or direct market spot again and again and again.

The only way you want to lose a customer is when the angels come to get them. You know you really have made it when they call your farm their farm where they get their strawberries.

Bobcat Introduces Skid-Steer Loader

FARGO, N.D.–Bobcat Company, a business unit of Ingersoll-Rand, announced four more models in its next-generation G-Series product line–751, 753, 763 and 963 skid-steer loaders.

Bobcat G-Series loaders feature a new cab and instrumentation design that enhances visibility and operator comfort and improves performance. The new loaders also offer value-added options such as deluxe instrumentation and dual-mode auxiliary hydraulics.

Bobcat 751 and 753 G-Series models have maneuverability and power. The Bobcat 751 G-Series skid-steer loader has a compact machine frame, providing greater maneuverability with a turning radius of just six feet. Its 1,250 pound rated operating capacity and 38 HP Kubota diesel engine handle a wide variety of job-site functions, including trenching, landscaping, loading and hauling. Its affordable price makes the Bobcat 751 an ideal loader for first-time and cost-conscious buyers.

Bobcat 763 G-Series has long wheelbase. With a 46 HP diesel engine and a rated operating capacity of 1,500 pounds, the Bobcat 763 G-Series loader produces greater traction and breakout forces for excavating and handling heavier loads. A long wheelbase helps provide its operators with a smooth ride. The 763 has a standard 15 gallons-per-minute (gpm) hydraulic pump for improved attachment performance. The loader also can be equipped with a factory-installed, high-flow option package to run attachments that require auxiliary hydraulics flow, including the Bobcat 963 G-Series are designed for maximum power and performance. Designed for heavy-duty performance and productivity, the Bobcat 963 G-Series has improved front and rear-corner visibility and increased front clearance for tilt and auxiliary tube lines.

Bobcat planer, wheel saw and trencher. With the increased hydraulic flow of 25 gpm and 3,000 pounds per square inch (psi) pressure, attachments such as the tiller and auger also operate more efficiently.

New models integrate the G-Series enhancements to increase operator comfort. Based on input from skid-steer loader users around the globe, the G-Series was designed to be even more operator-friendly and enhance operator efficiency. Bobcat G-Series cab enhancements include a new rear-pivot seat bar that offers more room for larger operators and more armrest support; an optional contoured cab door that increases visibility and maximizes cab space; a larger cab opening for easy entry and exit; and a high-efficiency heating and air conditioning system with four directional-flow vents that rotate to direct heat and cool air where it is most needed. (Air conditioning available on selected models only.)

F.M. Brown's Sons Conducts Regional Meetings

TRANQUILITY, N.J.–F.M. Brown's Sons, Inc. finished up their series of customer meetings recently with approximately 30 producers in attendance. This was the sixth meeting in the series with more than 300 participants overall.

Other meetings were conducted in Gap, Kutztown, Plumsteadville, Mt. Aetna, and Kistler, all in Pennsylvania.

The theme of the program was "What's New At Brown's." Dr. Carl Brown, sales manager of the feed division, led off the program with a slide presentation on this very topic.

Brown's presentation centered on the many changes that have recently occurred at Brown's and paid special emphasis to the new people and products that make Brown's unique. He introduced Mark Wagner, director of nutrition, and spoke of the many changes that took place in the Brown's product line in the past two years. Brown also showed slides of the new equipment at Brown's, including an automatic bagging system, new computer hardware, and new software including a totally revised billing and order handling system.

Chris Teprovich, seed division manager of F.M. Brown's, followed with a summary of the many seed division items, including forage crop seeds, grass seeds, corn seed, and soybean seed. He paid particular attention to Dairy Banquet, a mix of Banjo Triticale and Maximum Field Peas. This mix can be planted in late March as a companion crop to alfalfa or as a stand-alone crop for maximum tonnage of forage for early spring harvest. Harvest can usually occur at 60 days after planting, and protein levels as high as 21 percent with excellent energy content were recorded when Brown's took forage samples of last year's crop. Teprovich also discussed Hay Grazer alfalfa, an exceptional alfalfa with a dual purpose capability. It is an excellent alfalfa for grazing, and also a high yielding variety for harvest as hay or haylage. he also discussed WL325HQ and Seedway 512 alfalfa, both will be available from Brown's this spring, and both yield exceptionally high quality alfalfas with multi-leaf traits.

Mark Wagner, director of nutrition for F.M. Brown's, came to Brown's a little more than a year ago after spending the last three years as a technical services nutritionist in the Southeast for a national mineral company.

His topic was, "What is New in Nutrition?" covered three areas–biotin, corn silage digestibility, and the Availa line of organic minerals from Zinpro Corporation. He cited recent work from Italy, Germany, Ohio State, and Washington State University that indicated that Biotin, a B vitamin, might be deficient in diets of high producing dairy cows.

Wagner then discussed the importance and value of selecting corn hybrids for stover digestibility and discussed how digestibility is determined. Based on Michigan and Wisconsin research, the top five criteria for selecting corn varieties should be: high grain yield, high whole plant yield, strong standability, correct maturity, and whole plant digestibility. He then went on to illustrate how whole plant digestibility varies among different corn silage varieties.

He concluded his talk by briefly discussing the importance of trace mineral nutrition in dairy cattle. When insufficient trace minerals are fed, immune response is the first body function affected, followed by reduced growth and fertility and then finally clinical symptoms begin to appear. Zinc, copper, manganese, and cobalt are all very important trace minerals for dairy cattle.

Brent Miller, regional manager for Seedway, presented a talk on what is new in corn and soybean seed from Seedway and Asgrow. Brent focused on the new varieties of Roundup Ready Soybeans available from Asgrow, and stressed that Asgrow beans are recognized industry wide for their excellent disease resistance.

He discussed Donegal forage soybeans, a new variety of forage soybeans that grows to 6 to 7 feet tall, and Sprint Forage Mix, a mix of broad leaf forage oats and field peas for spring planting and early harvest.

John Myers, regional manager of AgBioTech, discussed ABT 350 and ABT 400 SCL alfalfa. These varieties did very well in the Penn State Test Plot Alfalfa Trails the past two years with ABT400SCL topping the Landisville plot this year.

Myers described the in-vitro true digestibility (IVTD) values which ABT runs on corn silage trials they conduct, and discussed ABT varieties that ranked high in these trials. BT4924 topped the Brubaker Corn Silage test plot trial last year, and BH4912 is a top grain yielder with a top IVTD rating and a high grain to stover ratio. He discussed new Brown Mid-Rib sorghums, including BMR100 forage sorghum and SSBMR 200, a highly digestible sorghum sudangrass. Both these varieties have high drought tolerance, but care must be taken not to seed too heavily or over fertilize these varieties.

Consolidating Farm Credit Associations Name CEO

WESTMINSTER, Md.–Walter Hopkins, chairman of the joint board of directors of Central Maryland Farm Credit, Chesapeake Farm Credit, Delaware Farm Credit, Keystone Farm Credit, and Marva Farm Credit, announced that J. Robert (Bob) Frazee is being named chief executive officer of the five associations.

The associations, operating under a joint management agreement, have announced their intention to consolidate to form MidAtlantic Farm Credit, effective July 1, 2000. Consolidation is subject to final approval of the Farm Credit Administration and approval of the voting stockholders of each association. Stockholders are scheduled to vote on the consolidation in April.

Under the Joint Management Agreement, Frazee will manage the operations of all five associations.

In announcing the appointment, Hopkins said, "We believe Frazee is the right person to lead our five associations as we proceed with our consolidation initiative. We see real financial benefits accruing to our members as a result of the consolidation and are committed to seeing it through. All five boards have voted to recommend the consolidation to their respective stockholders."

Frazee, a native of Friendsville, Md., has more than 22 years experience in banking. He has served in senior management positions within the Farm Credit System and the commercial banking industry. Frazee is a graduate of the University of Maryland's College of Agriculture and has pursued postgraduate studies at The Johns Hopkins University and the Stonier Graduate School of Banking.

July 27 Was An Excellent Day In Southwestern Pennsylvania

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)–One hundred six people enjoyed the education, networking, snooping, and fellowship that was made available through the Pennsylvania Retail Farm Market Association (PaFarm) bus tour in Allegheny and Washington counties.

If you could put the drought out of your mind for a while, the temperature and sunshine complimented the four outstanding retail farm markets that were the focus of activities the last Tuesday of July 1999. Forty-two people ended up traveling from the Harrisburg departure point.

The bus originating from Erie was not quite as successful. By the point of no return date, there were 16 people registered. This was hardly enough to keep from canceling the transportation contract. Some quick discussion among PaFarm members solved the dilemma. PaFarm would run the Erie bus at the risk of having to subsidize the cost. The Association felt offering this educational opportunity to as many people as possible had merit above the potential strain on the treasury. The extra seats were eventually occupied by local participants that were boarding the buses at the first tour stop in Wexford.

At the last minute, an extended van was added to the convoy in order to allow ten growers from North Carolina to participate. Participants representing four states were along for the opportunity to learn.

Soergel Orchards was the meeting place for everyone and the first market stop. The retail market was started in the early 1960s and covers 10,000 square feet. The Soergel family farms 400 acres. The employee numbers vary with the season, usually 50-90 part time mostly high school students. Sixty to forty percent of the produce sold is grown on this farm. Warren and Jean, their four children and spouses plus 13 grandchildren are all involved in this enterprise.

Best venture - kids entertainment, Nextel radio system.

Worst venture - people on salary.

The efforts toward consumer education were apparent at this location.

Kaelin Farm Market was stop number two. There are 85 owned acres supporting this retail market. Depending on the season, there are from 10 to 25 part-time employees. Most of these workers are adults with few teenagers. Approximately 85 percent of the produce sold is home grown.

The Kaelins have a flair for merchandising complimentary items as well as their agriculture education programs.

The Spring House, the third stop, is located in Washington County. This retail market opened in 1975 and covers 3,000 square feet. The farm consists of 420 acres. There are 60 employees on the payroll. The Minors produce, process and sell their own milk. Most of the pumpkins and sweet corn sold is homegrown. Additional fresh fruits and vegetables are purchased.

Best venture - Mothers Day chicken barbecue.

Worst venture- breakfast.

The Minors provided an example of exceeding customer expectations. The visitors were treated to a delicious meal in a shaded grove accompanied by live music.

Trax Farms was the final market stop. This Retail Farm Market was started in 1957 and has grown in size to the current 25,000 square feet. The farm covers 430 owned acres and 200 rented acres. The farm has 20 employees in the winter and 125 in the summer. The market has 70 winter employees and 100 in the summer. Fifty percent of the produce sold is grown by the Traxs. Ten families are involved with this enterprise. Fifteen owners are presently working, two are retired.

Best venture - Fall Festival.

Worst venture - second location.

They have planned a major garden center expansion.

Sustaining agriculture in Pennsylvania means many things to many people. One of the keys to sustainability is moving up the marketing channel to participate in more processing and marketing functions. Through the efforts of PaFarm, PASA and Cooperative Extension, the annual retail farm market educational bus tour provides ample opportunity to learn from the best.

Galvanized or Galvalume?

For metal roofing and siding, which is better, painted Galvanized or painted Galvalume?. Galvanizing is many times better if it's mill certified G100. Why is it better? Galvanizing tends to "heal" when scratched. The more galvanizing, the better. Everlast is ten times better at "healing" than galvalume because galvalume hardly "heals" at all when scratched. Also cut edges rust quickly on galvalume.

Risk Management on the Planning Planet

By John D. Rutherford Jr.
Farm Management Agent
Lebanon, Berks, and Dauphin Counties.

Come with me, won't you, on a trip to the far away galaxy of "Farm Business Management". In that galaxy is a planet called "Business Planning". Business planning is made of a number of continents which are specific plans any business should consider. These plans include Succession, Future Growth, and Nutrient Management, but there are others. Of concern to this article is the Risk Management Plan. You will see some aspects of this plan may be adjacent or even include other plans.

Before we set foot on this planet, let's consider why planning is important . (It's good to start with the easy questions.) Who would not rather deal with a situation calmly, with time to consult with the banker, nutritionist, extension agent or whomever; evaluate the merits of different alternatives; and communicate your decision to key people (like selling the idea to your spouse)? It is not hard to understand where this environment is more likely to produce a good decision than making decisions within the hour in a high-pressure situation. As many alternative strategies as you can have laid out and set plans to handle, the better your decision making will be in those events. And your farm should be that much more profitable.

Risk management is the area on this Planning Planet where I want to go with this article. Why risk management? For a number of reasons, risk management has become an increasingly important aspect of farm management. Statistically, farms have been on a general trend toward larger size. Coupled with growth is size has been growth in scale. Not only are farms producing more because they are larger, but they have to produce more per unit as well. They do this because profit margins are shrinking. Economic theory shows this will happen when technology makes more efficient production possible. The risk of losing a penny per unit of production is of little consequence when the margin $2, but it gets pretty dear when the margin in only 5 cents! Farms are specializing on fewer enterprises, focusing more time on the specific management and regulatory aspects. Market globalization not only means competing with producers all over the world, but also satisfying the whims of consumers everywhere. Do you remember the days when the protests of a French crowd could have no consequence on the marketability of your crop? What would happen now should the French decide they literally can't swallow meat from animals fed GMO grains? These are significant risks that farmers face today, without even mentioning everything that can go wrong when your livelihood depends on a biological process heavily influenced by weather. Top it off with the price interactions that usually move in the opposite direction as production and you wonder why aspirin sales aren't higher in rural areas!

Risk is the possibility of harm or loss. So anyone discussing the 'risk' of winning $100 or winning the lottery is not using the word correctly. It is not a risk to get less than the optimal (which is important in risk related to marketing), but it IS a risk if getting less than a certain price means you have to default on a loan.

The risks that farmers deal with come from six different sources. The largest source is in production. Anything that can go wrong in growing a plant or animal at some time has. If that happened to you this year, would you be able to absorb the loss? How do you know these things aren't going to happen again? The majority of information available to farmers deals with mitigating the various diseases, pests, and other setbacks related to an organism growing in a certain place to be marketable at a certain time.

The rest of the risks are in alphabetical order, starting with environmental. This is a new one to farmers. It used to be the barn was cleaned

Philadelphia Farmers' Mark

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.–Farmers must always look around for new ways to sell their crops, even to change what they grow, to respond to new markets. Recently, for example, many farmers growing tobacco, grains, and pigs have had to change what they grow to stay in business.

Selling directly to customers at seasonal farmers' markets is one option that has opened up wide in recent years. In 1980, there were only 100 farmers' markets in the United States. In 1994, the USDA listed 1,755 farmers' markets in its first farmers' market directory. By 1998, there were 2,746 farmers' markets. The United States is experiencing a dramatic revival of farmers markets in a win-win outcome for both farmers and market customers.

At farmers' markets, the farmers are in control: they set prices and eliminate the middle man. Farmers get to meet the people who eat the food they grow. Both farmers and customers discover an important connection across the produce tables at these outdoor markets. One customer said, "It's wonderful. There is no better person to buy produce from than the one that grows it. I really enjoy the market–great produce, great people."

Urban customers respond enthusiastically to the freshness and variety of locally grown fruits and vegetables. Another customer commented, "This market is great. I prefer it both for quality and to support family farms." Customer enthusiasm is so strong that the demand for fresh produce outstrips the supply of farmers as more markets open in the greater Philadelphia area.

In Philadelphia, a city with 1.5 million people, there was just one grower-only market in 1996. In 1999, 18 growers at five tailgate markets sold their fresh fruits and vegetables to appreciative city folks.

All but one of the farmers from the 1999 season are returning; two of the farmers will each sell at three markets, and several more at two markets. This growth is strong evidence that the Philadelphia markets are good for farmers.

This June, market organizers plan to open a new market on Saturday at Second and South Streets in the heart of Philadelphia's most popular weekend destination. Another Saturday market will be at Clark Park near the campus of the University of Pennsylvania. Farmers' markets in other areas of the city are open on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday.

The markets are held out of doors during the growing season, typically June through October. Farmers bring their fruits and vegetables and other farm products to the market site and sell from their trucks or tables set up nearby. Markets operate one or two days a week and are typically open from four to six hours.

Running a stall at a market is similar to operating a roadside

g a roadside stand. Farmers load their fruits and vegetables into a truck, or large van. They bring a table or two, a battery operated or spring scale, cash box, price tags, bags, farm sign, and shade structures, if the market has no natural shade. They bring their items for sale in crates and sell directly from the crates or display their produce on tables. Items sold by volume can be put in pint, quart, quarter peck or larger containers lined with a plastic bag, to eliminate weighing and simplify the transaction.

Farmers try to keep their displays colorful and full throughout the market period. The best sellers know the importance of good customer service: greeting and chatting with customers, remembering returning customers, and offering high quality items at reasonable prices.

There are still openings at several of the Philadelphia farmers' markets in 2000 for farmers who are committed to selling their highest quality products and helping the market program to grow. The Farmers' Market Trust, a non-profit organization that operates markets in Philadelphia, Camden, and Chester, is looking for conventional and organic vegetable farmers, IPM fruit farmers, flower growers, and producers of other farm items such as eggs, meats, milk, cheese, and other dairy products. Call the Farmers' Market Trust at 1-800-417-9499, ext. 25 to find out more about farmers' market opportunities in Philadelphia.

out when time allowed and chemical sprays did not exist. Now nutrient management plans must be filed and followed to ensure that manure does not contaminate. And pesticides are handled with care to promote the safety of applicator and the surrounding ecology.

Financial risk is a unique source to any business. On one hand, any impact on the farm is going to show up in the finances, so financial risk is inherent in everything. On the other hand, if the business has enough net worth (enough to absorb all of the potential loss) then there is minimal financial risk and the manager is free almost to ignore the possibility of loss. For instance, it is only in rare cases where we get really worked up over losing a postage stamp. Most of us can absorb the loss of 33 cents if a stamp is misplaced. But we whistle a different tune when it comes to the possibility of our dairy barn burning down.

Legal risks entail those topics which require a lawyer. Any laws dealing with employees, proper title to assets, or farm organization (to name a few) must be dealt with properly or the possibility for loss will exist.

Marketing risk has really been in the news these past couple years. These risks include having a market outlet for your product when it is ready and getting the necessary price out of it. As I said earlier, the possibility that you will get $5 for soybeans instead of $8 is not a risk if unless $5 is less than you need to stay in business. Knowing what number you need to stay in business is why you calculate your own cost of production (instead of having someone tell you what the state average is) and why you keep financial records.

The final risk is Personnel. As farms grow in size, often employees are hired to allow the operator some time for management. These people may not understand fully their duties nor your equipment, or they may be accident prone. How will you keep your farm from harm should an employee make a mistake?

Knowing the sources of risk helps you think critically about the dangers faced within your operation. This self-assessment identifies the risks that need to be removed, modified, or in some other way controlled. This assessment has to be done on a per farm basis because the risks and their potential, or perceived potential, are going to vary by farm and by manager. Some managers take on more risk than others. In the US economy, we usually see payoffs greater when greater risks are taken. But some managers are not comfortable with higher risks, and some financial situations would not withstand the loss if the greater risk did not payoff.

Given the conditions of the farm and the level of risk aversion of the manager, the risks can be thought of in terms of their level of risk and frequency of occurrence. If you see that something is a high risk and happens often, then this risk most definitely needs to be addressed. Conversely, potential problems that are rare in occurrence and of little consequence when they do could be overlooked in most any situation. However, there are two areas where risk or frequency are high enough that you must review your own prejudices toward risk and decide if this is one worth accepting or also finding a way to manage. Also keep in mind the financial standing of the business to determine which risks the business can withstand, regardless of these other judgements.

At this point it is time to seek out the risk managing options available for the unacceptable risks faced. These may range from the new production methods to some new way to market a crop. In many cases, a well-reasoned set of standard operating procedures will set the proper tone for your employees, neighbors, and officials. This is a tone that minimizes the possibility of problems and dims the accusation of negligence should one occur. Extension personnel, as well as many agricultural service providers, can assist you in both identifying potential risks and employing methods to manage them.

Risk management is an important means to protecting the accumulated, and potential, net worth of the business. Remember that risk management is only part of the whole planet that is business planning. I hope you have enjoyed your tour.

Attention
Dairy, Swine & Poultry Producers!
New Products Now Available...

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer these products to meet your nutritional needs. Manufacturing these products ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

GOLDEN PRO 46 XP
This natural, mechanically extruded and expelled soybean product is experiencing great acceptance with local dairymen. A course golden colored meal with a 6% fat content, Golden Pro 46 XP is extremely palatable. Golden Pro 46 XP is a natural way to bring the value of high by-pass protein into diets that require a lower fat level.

GOLDEN MEAL 40
An 18 percent fat content along with a 40 percent crude protein makes this mechanically extruded meal product a valuable component in a variety of rations. Full fat content gives you a high level of digestible energy, while high temperature extruding ruptures the oil cells for better nutritional absorbtions.

CRUDE SOYBEAN OIL
A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. A natural alternative to animal fats, this oil provides needed energy in various rations.

To make these products available, and to help you utilize your home raised soybeans Keystone Mills announces its

Soybean Exchange Program

As manufacturers and distributers of Golden Pro 46 XP and Golden Meal 40, we are anxious for you to try our products. We are offering a soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.

PURINA DAIRY HERD PROFILE

QUALITY

SERVICE

On the Gary Bowman farm, Quarryville, with the Loyal cow that has produced 36,183m 1,332f 1,073p. From left, Anthony Johnson, Rick Hess, Purina representative from Hess Mills, and Ellen, Jenny, Mark, and Gary Bowman. At school when the photo was taken is Laura, age 6.

For Gary and Jenny Bowman and their children Laura 6, Ellen 4, and Mark 1, dairy farming is their way of life. Since 1994 they have been on their own after buying the home herd from Gary's dad. For the last 3 years, they have lived and farmed on a rented place Southwest of Quarryville in Lancaster County.

But farming is also a business. And that's why they feed Purina feeds to produce lots of milk from their 62-cow registered Holstein dairy herd.

Of course, it helps that Purina is in their blood. From a boy growing up, Purina feeds has been part of Gary's life. Today working with their Country-Time prefix, they have a rolling herd average of 23,723 pounds of milk. On the most recent test, the average per cow was 85 pounds and 14 cows produced over 100 pounds. The most milk they ever got from a cow on test day was 140 pounds. They use no BST.

"There are three major reasons we feed Purina," Gary said. These reasons are not in any order of importance. But Purina is committed to quality. Their products show this quality and we do not need to worry about getting bad feed."

"And we are impressed with the research behind the feed," Jenny added. "We visited their research farm and it could not have been better."

"Yes, the research was my second reason," Gary said. "And my third reason is the service from Hess Mills, and Rick Hess as their representative to our farm. More than one time they have gone out of their way, beyond the call of duty, to help us if we need feed or have a problem."

The Bowmans milk 3x and feed TMR balanced to 75 pounds of milk. Purina's Hi-O 36 is used to balance a corn, barley, corn silage and haylage mix. For the cows with higher production a top-dress of Super EXT 24 is used.

The Bowmans like the quality and performance that seems to run hand in hand with Purina feeds. They also want everyone to know that they have an abiding faith in the Lord's providence and protection in their family and farming life. They recommend Purina to other dairy farmers for the same reasons they are satisfied customers themselves.

'Pumpkin Town' Big Highlight Of Entertainment Farm Market

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — It wasn't enough for Mason Farms to grow pumpkins.

They had to invent a town all of its own, appoint a mayor, and call it "Pumpkin Town, USA."

During October, visitors who stop by Pumpkin Town, near Erie, can see for themselves what can only be described as a Disneyworld of pumpkins, with pumpkin characters dressed up from favorite cartoons, fairy tales, and films.

Mason takes "entertainment farming" to a new level, attracting visitors in an effort, according to farm founder John Mason, to simply sell pumpkins by the pound.

Mason, who spoke at the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention late January in Hershey, operates the farm market in Erie County with Susan and their two sons, John and Joe, with 250 acres of fruit and vegetables.

They operate one retail farm market and garden center and one large roadside stand.

Since they began their stand using a card table by their farm with help from neighbors more than three decades ago, the Masons have made many changes. "Change is what the business is all about," said Mason.

From there, the business began to expand, from pick-your-own beans to strawber-

The Farmstand: Direct Marketing Tips

GETTING THE LOOKOVER–EFFECTIVE USE OF DISPLAYS

During visits at direct marketing locations during the last 12 months, one of the most asked or obvious questions was what could be done to increase consumer awareness of the marketer's offerings. Although a response is different depending where the business is located, how big it is, what it's advertising budget is, and what products are being offered for sale, some general considerations can be illustrated.

Even with all the emphasis placed on advertising as a necessary part of direct marketing, many still rely on the adage that "if I grow it, produce it, build it, etc. . . they will come." While this makes

Tomato Growers Strive For 50 Tons Or More Per Acre

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Growers of processed tomatoes are still searching for that magical combination of weather, plant genetics, soil health, and other intangibles to achieve an average of 50 tons per acre at harvest.

Meanwhile, for their accomplishments, Furman Foods, Northumberland, recently honored several growers for their success in late January this year at the annual Tomato Awards Luncheon at the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention in Hershey.

James Kohl, vice president of Furman Foods, said that about five or six years ago, one Furman grower in Lancaster County harvested an average of almost 50 tons per acre — about 48.9 tons per acre. The growing conditions have to be ideal, Kohl noted.

This past year the weather was ideal in the Midwest and West. In Fremont, Ohio, and parts of Indiana, growers averaged more than 50 tons per acre, as did some in California.

Furman said under those conditions, some growers can average about 37 tons per acre. The past year growers in this region relied heavily on irrigation because of the severe drought. The company works with about 50 growers in Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, and New York.

Furman also honored Dr. Alan MacNab, professor of plant pathology at Penn State, for his accomplishments.

For Pennsylvania cannery, in the more than 100 acres category, Cliff Charles was the winner with a harvest of 26.13 tons per acre. In the 60-100 acres category, M.R. Dickinson and Son harvested 24.36 tons per acre. In the 45-59 acres category, Camerer Farms Inc. harvested 29.94 tons per acre. In the 30-44 acres category, Ramm Farms harvested 35.43 tons per acre. In the 15-29 acre category, Paul Wadel harvested 33.04 tons per acre. In the less than 15 acres category, Philip Nolt harvested 25.85 tons per acre.

In the Maryland cannery category, at more than 50 acres, Turner Farms harvested 33.76 tons per acre. In the less than 50 acres category, Hilmer Helguson harvested 30.11 tons per acre.

Dr. Alan MacNab, Penn State professor of plant pathology, left, was honored for his contributions to the tomato processing industry by James Kohl of Furman Foods.

Stewart Ramm, Ramm Farms, Lock Haven, left, was honored by Furman Foods by James Kohl.

for great storylines in movies, it is rarely effective in business unless you have an incredibly unusual product or a to-die-for location. More often than not, most markets are not blessed with either (as perceived by the buying public). Because of this, many efforts must be made to allow the seller the chance to convince the consumer to stop, buy, and then return for more.

So whether you are selling ornamentals in the fall, free-range chicken, or apples from the orchard, you need to have a great appeal that outshines your competitors.

While not trying to downplay the importance of quality, good customer service, or variety of product, creating an attractive display can be very important to capturing the attention of customers. Often signage is used to focus the buyer on what is being offered. Without a doubt, this is a critical piece of the marketing equation but by no means all of it. Signs tell the buyer what you have, what it will cost them, and possibly why they need it or how they can use it. All these are crucial to a sale. But someone on a quest for pumpkins for their kids wants to "see" you have them and know whether they will have a great selection! It's September, you have a roadside stand and raise pumpkins for sale, so put them out front for the world to see, not in the area on the side or behind the store. Put them up on straw bales, mixed in with corn stalks, or up on top of hay wagons. Mix in groups of hardy mums, shrubs and trees for fall planting and you have the beginnings of a good display.

Be careful when mixing to not create chaos. The point is to create eye appeal, especially from the road. But when the customer goes through the display looking for something, there should be no question about whether or not it's for sale or display purposes, what it cost, and that it is of excellent quality. And don't look at displays as something to be changed only with the seasons.

Moving larger storefront displays may take some time but seeing the same items in a very different arrangement can be an effective marketing tool and capture someone's attention driving past. With the same thought in mind, locating an outdoor display near your sign will give people a new look at a sign they may have stopped seeing because of familiarity.

In-store displays should receive the same amount of attention, as should those on your tables if you're a member of a farmers market. Attractive displays can easily be made with items you have for sale at the moment. Even perishable items such as fresh meats in a coooler can be arranged or prepared to entice a purchase. In this case, possibly the addition of marinated products or pre-cut shish kabobs on a stick can be added to get the customer to purchase something they might have not considered on a previous trip along with something they will now tell others you are offering.

At farm market tables, highlight new items in a central location where you commonly see people look first or near a hot seasonal seller and offer samples if possible. If you're selling a food product, offer recipes or give written planting instructions for trees and shrubs. Always attempt to give the customer the impression of bounty so they don't feel they are purchasing the last of something and use containers that compliment your facility.

If you sell locally grown tomatoes, don't display them in recycled California produce boxes. This gives the customer mixed messages and distracts from your market appeal.

Along with creating new displays and changing them to draw and maintain interest, keep track of comments, customer reactions, and sales response that can be traced to your display efforts. Even the best of displays can be made better. Use the information you gather to give you new ideas and to gauge what the customer is looking for. Too often, in the haste of day-to-day business, it is easy to forget what draws the customer to your product. But with the number of direct marketing businesses now more than 5,000 in Pennsylvania and growing rapidly, your customers have plenty of choices and can easily visit someone else.

Keep the display ideas fresh, make them easy and attractive to look at, and be innovative in your use of materials.

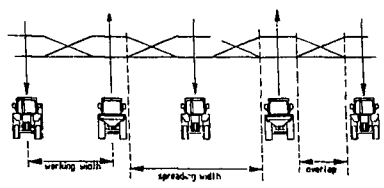
Spreaders are the most accurate broadcast spreaders in the world. The unique pendulum action keeps the spread pattern close to the rear of the machine while at the same time providing a symmetrical pattern on both sides.



The pattern allows "back and forth" as well as "around and around" operation. The "truncated" pattern offsets inaccurate overlap problems, eliminating streaking.

Vicon Seeder spreaders are easily calibrated for extremely accurate performance.

Rust free polyester hoppers, "DURA-COAT" enamel on painted components with stainless steel metering plates, precision adjustments, and a variety of spouts for a multitude of applications have earned Vicon Superflow seeder spreaders a world-wide reputation as the premier broadcast spreader.

Versatile Vicon spreaders band material in vineyards, orchards and nurseries, as well as spread lime, and salt and sand for winter use.

ries. The Masons increased strawberry and melon production and constructed bigger farm stands.

All along, the farm market continued to advertise its existence. "You have to have your name in the public all the time, so they know who you are," said Mason.

Additional changes were made, including the addition of a greenhouse. People still love to visit a greenhouse, Mason noted. The Masons added an ice cream stand at the market and other items.

Mason soon realized he wasn't in the business of selling produce, but entertainment. They began to host school groups, including kindergarten classes. Now they host about 5,000-6,000 school kids a year.

Eventually, the permanent farm market was constructed about eight years ago on Peninsula Drive, about six miles from downtown Erie, near a previous location once leased. The other smaller market is about 14 miles from the center of Erie.

The Masons manage about 100 acres of grapes, including 50-80 acres of custom-pick grapes. They purchase produce, when possible, from other farms.

Mason spoke about some pitfalls in managing a permanent farm market site.

First, he said, don't build a market in the middle of summer, at the height of the season when you are already too busy, he noted. Don't use a bare cement floor. "Cover it with a nice industrial tile," he said, which doesn't create dust and can be easily cleaned.

And work closely with other enterprises in the area to promote food and farming. Mason Farms works closely with the McDonald's Restaurant next door and hosts Easter egg hunts and other events.

"Display flowers everywhere in the spring," Mason said. Display plenty of hanging baskets. Get involved in landscaping displays at various home shows to display farm market name. Host various farm market commodity festivals, including strawberry and pumpkin events. Hosts special events and contests. Mason even conducts a watermelon seed-spitting contest. Educate and entertain the young, he noted. They will be with you the rest of their lives.

During October's Pumpkin Town USA celebration, not only are there dressed-up pumpkins, but the farm market hosts a petting zoo, climbing wall, concession stand with lots of apple cider sipper cups, and lots of other entertainment for the family.

At Christmastime, the farm market sells wreaths and Christmas trees. "We display our trees on pegs, with more than 300 trees standing all at one time," Mason said.

The farm sells Fraser firs as high as 16 feet for $160 a piece. The farm pays about $80-$100 a piece for the large trees.

Mason Farms has a variety of ways to dress pumpkins, adopting ideas from films, cartoons, fairy tales, and other sources.

As an added benefit, Mason Farms is involved in many public service announcements to promote caring for children, improved nutrition at home, spring planting, and hints on year-long planting. The announcements include tips on soil tests, proper planting techniques, and flower gardening information. "Allow employees to do what they do best," he said.

Mason said, "You have to think like a businessman rather than a farmer."

Startup Markets

"We're not in the business of entertainment farming, not us," said Dale Riggs of Stone Wall Hill Farm, LLC, Stephentown, N.Y.

Riggs, who operates a small farm market with her husband Don Miles, spoke about her startup experiences at the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention in Hershey.

At The Berry Patch of Stone Wall Hill Farm, Riggs put together a distinct mission statement. That statement clearly defines the market's purpose: to provide quality products for health living for the community. "Candy canes, fudge — they are not part of our value system," she said.

"If it's not grown locally, you won't find it here," she said.

Riggs, who also operates a consulting business, D. Riggs Consulting, specializes in production and management issues for berry and vegetable producers. She served as an area vegetable specialist for Cornell for more than nine years.

Riggs purchased an existing farm with a small farm market stand in 1995. The 91-acre farm, located 33 miles east of Albany, N.Y., includes about 18-20 acres of tillable acreage. The good gravelly loam soil was ideal for strawberries and other crops, with some additional changes.

"Don't even think about (producing vegetables) without irrigation," she said. The Riggs use a one-third acre farm pond about 11 feet deep for irrigation.

Riggs felt confident about growing and marketing strawberries, including a small pick-your-own, because it was her speciality for 24-25 years. But before she began the farm business, she conducted a customer survey to ensure their plans were on track.

Of the top market needs for berries, customers identified blueberries and strawberries. They wanted apples and peaches for fruit crops. For vegetables, customers wanted sweet corn and tomatoes. And they wanted baked goods, too.

There was an interest in pick-your-own berries, vegetables, and pumpkins. The site was not good for orchards.

For strawberries, a real concern was frost protection. The farm had to irrigate to protect from frost on June 1 and again the first weekend of October.

The farm market serves a small clientele, about 2,102 people from the small town of Stephentown, but gets some tourist traffic from New York City.

The farm market started small, said Riggs, in 1996, using about one acre. The huge strawberries that first year "tasted wonderful," she said. In 1997, the farm harvested about 15,000 pounds per acre; in 1998, about 20,000 pounds per acre; but in 1999, because of severe weed problems, only about 7,500 pounds of strawberries per acre. Work needs to be done to ensure improved harvests, including some field repairs, she noted.

About 80 percent of the business is pick your own. The farm employs a strict "rules of the berry patch" for kids and others to follow. A big rule is "no running."

In 1999, the farm stand operated from Aug. 20 through Oct. 18 and was self-service until Oct. 31. The market is open from 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Friday, Saturday, Sunday, and Monday.

Some simple ideas that Riggs followed for her start-up farm market: use items found on the farm of interest to customers. She even provided an insect collection from college. "The butterflies captivated every kid," Riggs said.

Some pitfalls she encountered:

• The previous owners supplied the least expensive produce around. "Don't operate that way," she said. Instead, ensure them of a quality, healthy product — something worth a small premium.

• Be wary of priorities. Ensure that plants are ordered, planted, and cared for on time.

• Learn to spend time inside the stand. It was hard, Riggs noted, to spend time at the cash register, especially as she considers herself an outdoors-type person.

• Get the signs right. Make them professional-looking and allow them to define what your market is all about.

• Run the farm, don't let the farm run you. And don't forget the vital, family recreational activities to keep the family from burning out.

The pleasures:

• Meeting a lot of really great people, she said. Homeowners told Riggs they had the "best produce ever found."

• A farm market can provide a wonderful, creative outlet.

• The market can be intellectually stimulating, she said.

• The market allows you to build your dreams and contribute to society.

And having fun is important, too. "If you're having fun doing what you are doing, your customers are going to like coming there," said Riggs.

Roadside Marketing

Larry Yager, Penn State marketing agent, noted ways growers adopted new ideas — and made some money.

One fruit grower got rid of apples and put in a corn maze. The first year, 8,000 people toured the maze at $5 apiece.

Another grower, unhappy with vegetable production, took three duck ponds and stocked each of them with fish — trout in one, catfish in another, and bass in the third. His cost for the fish — $2.75 a pound. He sold them at $3.95 a pound. Potential sales were $1,200-$1,600 off an acre of water. "You can't do that with fruit and vegetable crops," said Yager.

Yager spoke about various ways in which farm markets can adapt and change to increase profitability at the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention in Hershey.

A market is a matter of "projecting your image — lifestyle and habits and trends," Yager said.

Consumers are grazers today, he said, eating on the run. They crave fast food. They don't have the time to prepare meals. To market to their demands, farm managers must realize that marketing "is not advertising — it is location. And the consumers' first impression comes from signage."

Produce is now the focal point of most supermarkets, said the extension marketing agent. Markup is 40-45 percent and more, and is counted on to increase store profitability.

To survive, farm marketers must think more like grocery store managers. Educate the consumers with signage. Develop signature items, said Yager, items that "make you unique," he said.

Foremost, consumers are looking for taste and flavor in the produce they buy.

Susan Barton, extension specialist at the University of Delaware, suggested that growers visit Homestead Gardens in Davidsonville, Md. The signage is unique and attractive to consumers, making it an "excellent garden center.

"They make a big impact with their road frontage," she said.

For signage, keep information on it as simple and as short as possible. Make it easy for people to see, using bright colors, plant displays, and "punchy and to the point," said Barton.

Signs should reflect the image of the market, said Barton. They could be as simple as using commodity bags hung over items to sell or more complex signs that provide some planting tips for items. Phrasing should be enticing. But the signs should be consistent and reflect the market's general personality.

The Farmstand: Direct Marketing Tips

seasons. And yet that is exactly what several hundred direct marketers did last October and this past July.

The Pennsylvania Direct Farm Marketing Association sponsored two tours to different parts of Pennsylvania to look at successful markets and give participants the opportunity to see what makes them thrive. The theory is to really understand what makes them work, you have to visit when it's busiest. Seeing it on slides during the winter is helpful but important details and frustrations are often overlooked. With this approach, the tours offered great insights of how these marketers were able to create customer appeal and succeed.

Evaluations of individual locations were made after each stop and offered a positive critique of the strengths and weaknesses of each market. The following is a summary of the most commonly mentioned ideas and concerns from those who were featured on the tours.

An often-repeated concern was that they never allowed for an orderly expansion. Many never envisioned the need for additional room in the future and failed to plan for it. When starting a building project due to increased demand for your services, assume interest in your business will expand and you will probably be back in the same great predicament in the future. Think about property line setbacks, utility connections, parking, and road visibility. For instance, if you anticipate a separate bakery in the next five years, will you have enough room to add it or will the new commercial kitchen you're now building need to be moved. Consider many of the most probable expansion possibilities and allow for them in your plans. The bottom line is to always think bigger than you are now.

What is the overall look of the market facility? If it's a farm market, does it have that "feel"? Is it an odd assortment of buildings or a small coordinated village of related structures? Multistructured establishments can have rooms with different purposes and themes such as flowers and plants, produce, canned goods, gardening supplies, deli, gift shop and others. Even if you have a single building, do you have a pleasing color scheme inside and out and do display items add or distract from the look? The most successful businesses visited looked at the big picture and coordinated all aspects of the market.

Parking was a concern often expressed. Parking should be convenient and allow easy access to your business. Again, this is an important time to think ahead. If you plan to offer school tours in the future and you will have several buses in the lot turning out, will they and your regular customers both have adequate room along with safe entrance and exit from your location? Even though regulations are always changing, are there already some in your township that could require a relocation of the driveway you're now planning if the traffic load was to change significantly. A little additional research now could potentially save big dollars later. Problems with township regulations are very commonly cited by marketers as roadblocks to growth. And if you plan to get into any type of agri-entertainment, how will the local supervisors view it, as an agricultural enterprise or an unrelated business?

Marketers visited often discussed how they started something in the business on a whim, and customer reception was so good it grew into a main segment of their business. The point is, don't overlook opportunities because they weren't in the business plan. Quirky ideas can be very profitable if you are receptive and open minded to the unexpected. Learn from others in related businesses and compare the similarities in your clientele. Owners often mentioned how important it was to know what your customer base is, what their income levels are, what buying patterns they've discovered, and how they use various advertising mediums to exploit opportunity. Many stated how they advertised the wrong way only to discover sometime later that few of their customers ever saw their ads. And evaluate your ads, even if it's simply asking every fifth person if they have seen one and whether or not it influenced their decision to visit the store.

Don't try to produce everything you sell in the store. You can't do it all. Concentrate on marketing what you do best and buying complimentary products and services from other vendors. And check the quality of items you bring in to make sure they are up to your standards. Your customers will assume you do and expect you to make good on them if they aren't. Networking with other local producers can be a profitable opportunity for both of you.

And be as active as possible in your community and with related business organizations. This can often lead to pathways through regulatory dilemmas along with being a responsible neighbor to others nearby.

One such organization is the Pennsylvania Direct Farm Marketing Association. Currently membership in the association is free. They are presently arranging their next marketing tour in another region of the state. The association also has an ongoing project of determining the extent of township regulatory requirements affecting direct marketers and how to make the rules more uniform. The group has been reorganized and made strides in advancing the cause of direct marketing. To join the group, you can contact John Berry, the executive secretary at (610) 391-9840 or visit them at the organization's new website, http://www.pafarm.com.

Farmers Wanted For Markets; Growers Are In 'Driver's Seat'

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — As far as making money, "you're in the driver's seat," said Paul Hauser, produce grower from Oxford.

Farm market managers control their own income because they can control their own prices and adjust what they sell to the demands of the market.

Hauser, like several farm market managers, knows how challenging and rewarding having a farm market can be.

Hauser was one of three producers who spoke on a growers-only farm market panel in January at the New Holland Vegetable Day at Yoder's Restaurant in New Holland.

Ed Herrmann, grower and Solanco Young Farmers Association director, sets up a table with his own produce in flea markets near Washington, D.C.

The high-scale, upbeat market moves produce very fast. "The prices are worth the trouble of going down there," he told those who attended the vegetable day.

The customers can pay top dollar for items. "Know who your customer is and explore that," said Herrmann.

Bob Pierson is urging farmers to participate in growers-only markets near Philadelphia. He said demand for them is growing, and their numbers continue to grow.

In 1980, there were only 100 farmers' markets in the state. That number expanded 10-fold to 1,755 markets in 1994 and 2,746 markets in 1998.

Importantly, customers don't care what the produce looks like, but how it tastes. So, like Hauser and other farmers, Pierson urges market managers to offer free "taste tests" of produce grown.

The Farmers' Market Trust is looking for farmers to sell their highest quality fruits and vegetables. The Trust is looking for farmers who can come to the city for 4-6 hours a week from June through October.

Some farmers averaged sales of more than $1,000 per day at the markets during peak weeks in 1999, Pierson noted. Farmers averaged $625 per day for all of 1999. Sales in 1999 were up 28 percent over 1998.

This year the Trust will operate markets in Philadelphia and Chester, in addition to Camden, N.J. A new market will open on South Street in Philadelphia at 2nd Street.

Another successful market is Clark Park, of which several area growers participate.

The markets accept vouchers from the Women, Infants, and Children Program, which grants $20 in spending to each senior who purchases food from a farm market vendor.

About $300,000 of WIC money has been allocated for use and can be spent at farmers' markets in Philadelphia, Pierson noted.

For more information about the farmers' market opportunities, call Pierson at (800) 417-9499 or (215) 568-0830 ext. 25.

Linda Boyer, a producer in Narvon Township, noted that, since growers offer a variety of produce, particularly tasty heirloom varieties, they can "double and triple sales. . . . sometimes even more," she said.

For specialty items, buyers are willing to pay $2-3 a pound for heirloom tomatoes.

Organic Certification Program Applications Available

BINGHAMTON, N.Y.–Many farmers are becoming interested in the potential for sales in the growing market for organically produced food. These farmers, and the consumers who seek to buy their products, will benefit from the Organic Certification Program of the Northeast Organic Farming Association of New York, Inc. (NOFA-NY).

The Organic Certification Program of NOFA-NY announces the availability of the updated organic production Standards Manual and Application Packet for 2000. The NOFA-NY Organic Certification Program offers standards for the certification of vegetables, fruits, grains and beans, livestock, milk production, maple syrup, cheese, yogurt, wine, sprouts, greenhouse production and for companies handling and processing organic products. New in 2000 are standards for the production of Tilapia fish.

The NOFA-NY Organic Certification Program is one of the largest in the Northeast in both number of farms and in acreage certified. The program certifies farms and processors in New York and Pennsylvania and has been growing steadily since its inception in 1984. NOFA-NY offers a highly respected, third party certification process that is well recognized in the marketplace.

With the increase in demand for organic food sources, organic certification can be a valuable marketing tool for the farmer.

"Many wholesalers, stores and restaurants require certification of the organic foods they purchase. As consumer demand rises so does consumer awareness, and increasingly consumers are looking for certified products as well," said Patricia Kane, administrator of the NOFA-NY program.

Farmer experience in the program has shown organic certification to be particularly valuable when a new farm is working to break into established markets or when an existing farm seeks to expand its production and sales.

Certification is also a valuable asset for the consumer of farm products. "Without organic certification, the only way a consumer can be sure of how their food is produced is to visit the farm. I don't think many consumers have time for that," said Kane. "The NOFA-NY label on a product is an assurance that it was organically produced and many customers have come to depend on this assurance when making food choices."

The heart of the certification process is the standards manual. It is the standards that outline what practices are acceptable in organic production. Kane pointed out that, "The standards manual is more than just a set of rules for the farmer. The standards manual is a valuable reference for all farmers interested in alternative farming methods, whether or not they have an interest in certification."

The standards suggest a comprehensive alternative to conventional farming methods and any interested producer is sure to discover options that can help solve problems and improve profitability on their farm. It should be encouraging to know that the methods outlined in the organic certification standards are successfully used on farms ranging from half-acre intensively cropped market gardens to dairy farms and 600-acre grain farms.

Also included in the 100+ page booklet are a series of appendices detailing the development of organic farming methods including Effective Use of Fresh Manure, Organic Greenhouse Production, Organic and Untreated Seed Sources and Organic Vegetable Transplants and Nursery Stock, Approved Materials List for 2000, Dealing with Pesticide Spray Drift, Compost Basics, Spreader Stickers and Spray Adjuvants, and Cover Crops at a Glance.

To order a copy of the 2000 NOFA-NY Organic Certification Standards Manual, send check or money order in the amount of $15 payable to NOFA-NY, to NOFA-NY Organic Certification Program, 26 Towpath Road, Binghamton, NY 13904.

For more information on the activities of NOFA-NY or additional information on the certification process, contact the certification program office at (607) 724-9851.

Ridge Administration Announces 'Growing Greener' Funds

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)–Lt. Gov. Mark Schweiker marked the fifth week of "100 Days of Growing Greener" by announcing $50,000 in "Growing Greener" funds to help 10 communities across the state to develop community gateway gardens.

"With these gardens, 'Growing Greener' helps cities and towns provide a more scenic welcome for residents and visitors," Lt. Gov. Schweiker said. "This proves that sometimes just a small amount of financial support from the commonwealth can pay huge dividends to communities. In this case, $50,000 helps 10 urban areas display community pride. What a difference a small plot of flowers makes to an urban landscape, where concrete normally rules. It's all about making Pennsylvania's quality of life even better." The Community Gateway Gardens is a partnership program among the Pennsylvania departments of Conservation and Natural Resources (DCNR) and Transportation (PennDOT), and the Western Pennsylvania Conservancy.

The gardens will beautify small tracts at key entranceways into the towns and cities planted with colorful displays of annuals, perennials, ornamental grasses, shrubs and small flowering trees.

Grants are awarded to develop gardens in Beaver, Blair, Butler, Cambria, Cumberland, Dauphin, Schuylkill, and Westmoreland counties. For 100 days–from the Farm Show in early January until Earth Day on April 22–Gov. Ridge and his Administration are announcing at least one new "Growing Greener" initiative every week to show how the state's largest-ever environmental investment is benefiting Pennsylvanians.

"Growing Greener" funding for these gardens will support design, soil testing for proper pH, purchase of topsoil, compost, mulch and flowers, and the installation of drip irrigation for water supply. Subsequent replanting of the gardens is the responsibility of each municipality.

Community Gateways Gardens is an offshoot of the Western Pennsylvania Conservancy's Community Flower Bed program, begun in 1983 in Allegheny County. The program has grown from six flowerbeds in the city of Pittsburgh to more than 400 garden sites across the commonwealth. In 1998, DCNR initiated the Community Gateways Gardens partnership with the conservancy. PennDOT joined the partnership in 1999, adding funds from the federal Transportation Enhancement Act for the 21st Century (TEA-21).

Craig Receives Grower Award

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)–Pennsylvania State University Professor of Horticulture, Dr. Richard Craig, was presented with the Pennsylvania Floral Industry Association's Flower Grower Award on Feb. 3 at the Capitol Region Greenhouse Grower Meeting in Leola.

The award for outstanding and meritorious contribution to the floriculture industry was presented to Craig in recognition of his lifetime of research in the field of plant breeding and genetics.

Craig is well known for his work in the development of the world's first seed geranium, "Nittany Lion Red," that has led to the multitude of geranium varieties available to the home gardener today.

Craig's current work includes development of new varieties of Exacum for fresh flower, potted plant, and garden uses, studying Botrytis resistance in geraniums, breeding new improved cultivars of Regal geraniums that will bloom all summer, and studying pest resistance, seed production, and techniques for cultivar identification in poinsettias.

In addition to research Craig has taught many classes at Penn State, including plant breeding, advanced plant breeding, experimental procedures in plant research, and horticultural systematics. Craig has conducted many senior seminars and independent study projects and trained more than 40 graduate students.

Yager Receives First Annual Award

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.)–Laurence Yager, associate professor of agricultural economics at Penn State, based in the Adams County extension office, was awarded the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association (PVGA) first Annual Award.

Robert Trax, president of the association, made the presentation at the annual grower dinner at the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention in Hershey.

PVGA is beginning the new millennium by instituting the Annual Award program. In the past, the association from time to time presented special recognitions to certain individuals or life memberships to persons who have a longstanding history of service to the association.

But the board of directors decided it would be appropriate to annually recognize an individual who has made a special contribution to the Association or the vegetable and berry industries in Pennsylvania.

Yager, the first recipient of this Annual Award, is well known to fruit and vegetable growers throughout the state. Although his official territory of service is just a section of the state, his agricultural marketing expertise has enabled him to assist producers of various agricultural commodities not only in capitol region but throughout the commonwealth.

As part of his longstanding dedication to direct marketers, Yager has been active in organizing meetings and tours for direct marketers in the Mid-Atlantic region and on a national basis as well. Many farm market operators in the state have benefited from his advice in designing

DeCou Receives 2000 Outstanding Fruit Grower Award

CLAYTON, N.J.–Genie DeCou, owner of DeCou Hilltop Orchards near Shiloh, N.J., was recently selected Outstanding Fruit Grower by the New Jersey State Horticultural Society. DeCou operates DeCou Orchards with her son, Tom, and brother-in-law, Rolf DeCou. She was presented the award by Mr. Douglas Zee Jr. at the South Jersey Fruit Meeting and Trade Show in Glassboro Feb. 16 as part of the celebration of the 125th Anniversary of the New Jersey State Horticultural Society.

"DeCou Orchards was purchased in 1965 by Ms. DeCou and her late husband, Lauren DeCou, from a badly deteriorated 250-acre orchard and has grown to a modern 500-acre farm of peaches, apples, nectarines, blackberries, raspberries, oriental pears, pumpkins and grapes," said Zee. "Genie has been a leader in direct marketing of Jersey Fresh peaches and other produce. Her well-known farm market is being rebuilt to handle a growing farm business."

DeCou is one of the founders of Eastern Pro Pak in Glassboro and its modern peach packing plant and is a director and part of the management team that packs all of the DeCou peaches under the Jersey Fruit label.

"Genie DeCou has always been an innovator and one interested in trying new production techniques, new varieties and fruit types like brambles, wine, and table grapes," said Zee.

Beekeepers To Meet

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.)–Have you ever thought about becoming a beekeeper? Are you interested in nature? Agriculture?

Do you know how important honey bees are to agriculture?

Over one-third of our daily diet of vegetables, fruit, milk, and meat is either directly or indirectly attributed to honey bee pollination. Agriculture needs beekeepers.

Would you like to be a part of agriculture, and enjoy harvesting your own honey? If so, read on.

The Capitol Area Beekeepers Association is offering its 13th annual Short Course In Basic Beekeeping, a 2-day short course, May 13 from 8:00 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Dauphin County Agriculture and Natural Resources Center in Dauphin, and May 20 from noon to 5 p.m. at the Milton Hershey Farm Conference Center and Apiary in Hershey.

The course is sponsored by the association in cooperation with the Penn State Cooperative Extension.

The course faculty includes cooperative extension apiculturist Maryann Frazier, Chief State Apiary Inspector Jim Steinhauer, Penn State honey bee researcher Jennifer Finley, regional apiary inspector Tracy Helton, and several experienced and qualified members of the association. Each registered attendee will receive a packet of beginning beekeeping information and other course-related handouts.

Preregistration is requested before May 8. The course fee is $25 per person. Participants are encouraged to bring a bee veil and protective suit, if possible. A brown bag lunch is suggested, although fast-food restaurants are located nearby.

For a registration form, location maps, and lodging information, contact Maria Contino, secretary, 6087 Rockland Dr., Harrisburg, PA 17112, or call (717) 657-3932.

While Yager is widely known for this expertise in direct marketing, he has also helped growers organize wholesale marketing ventures as well. Many of the produce auctions here in Pennsylvania have sought his help in establishing their businesses. He has probably attended more meetings and committees that he cares to remember to listen and give his input on marketing topics. He is helping with the "Simply Delicious" Produce Promotion Program.

Born and raised on a farm in western New York State, Yager did his undergraduate work at Cornell University and graduate work at Penn State. He served four years in the U.S. Air Force during the Korean Conflict. He was an extension farm management specialist at the university for two years and then served as an extension marketing agent for the seven-county capitol region for the past 36 years. During this time he has taken leaves of absence to serve overseas for Penn State in the Bahamas, Poland, Swaziland, and Armenia. He plans to retire this spring from the Adams County extension.

Farmers' Market Training Workshop Helps Growers Prepare For A New Season

SYRACUSE, N.Y.–The 2000 farmers' market season is rapidly approaching.

Market managers, market committees, and market boards are gearing up all across New York State to make plans to make the 2000 season a success.

They're looking to make a more pleasant shopping experience for their customers by offering more sellers, more products, and more events. For the farmers, they're trying to bring in larger numbers of customers to increase the sales of each seller at their markets.

The Farmers' Market Federation of New York is offering a farmers' market planning workshop to help all those managers, committees and boards prepare for the new season. This workshop, "Preparing for a New Season," will be March 21 at the Corning Intown Promotions Office, Corning, N.Y., and is open to anyone interested in helping to make the 2000 farmers' market season a success.

Speakers will cover a wide range of topics, Janet Nelson, extension associate from Cornell University, will discuss the Farmers' Market Nutrition Program. This program, through the NYS Department of Agriculture and Markets and the WIC program, offers $20 to WIC recipients to spend at farmers' markets through the course of the season. It's an excellent program to introduce young mothers and their children to farmers' markets and help them to raise their nutritional well being by eating healthy, fresh fruits and vegetables. It's also an opportunity for farmers and market managers to educate these mothers about New York State agriculture and the bounty of products that are raised right here in the state and offered at over 200 farmers' markets across the state.

Recruiting new farmers is a constant struggle for many of the farmers' markets in New York. Andre Goncarovs, from the Ithaca's Farmers' Market, will be sharing a program that he helped to develop to recruit new farm enterprises to the Ithaca Farmers' Market. The program, called the easy entry program, has been successfully used in Ithaca for several years and has brought many new farmers into their market.

Most of the state's farmers markets do not have budgets large enough to do much traditional advertising; radio, television or print ads. But free publicity can be found if you know where to look. John Ehrenreich, city editor for the Corning Leader, will be speaking on the use of press releases as a means of promoting farmers' markets. He'll help market managers understand how to make use of this valuable tool. He'll also discuss ways markets can "court" the press to get the maximum amount of coverage possible. His tips and insights come straight from years experience at being an editor for a daily newspaper.

Monika Roth, a Cornell Cooperative extension educator with the South Central New York Area Ag Program, will be sharing her expertise on keeping track of a market's performance. She will be talking about what kinds of information managers need to collect, including customer demographics, sales records, attendance records, etc. All of the records she will be discussing are important for farmers' markets to be able to document the market's economic impact, apply for grants, determine what the customers and vendors needs are, and for tracking year to year growth.

Finally, a consumer panel will present what they see as an ideal farmers' market, including what the market must offer in terms of amenities for customers, the product diversity they are interested in, and the optimum location and operating times for a market. They'll also discuss what attracts them to one seller's booth over another. Is it the display techniques, the customer service, the product offered or a combination of several factors? They'll be frank with their opinions and be available to answer questions from the audience. Everyone will be able to learn something from the panel presentation.

Registration is $15 per person and includes all presentations, handout materials, and lunch. Reservations are requested. Call the Farmers' Market Federation office for more information and reservations, (315) 475-1101.

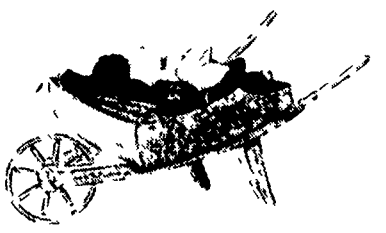
Newsletter To Deliver Marketing, Business Information To Farmer Direct Marketers

MERIDEN, Conn.–A new publication will soon deliver marketing and business information to farmer direct marketers throughout the United States.

The newsletter, called The Seasonal Marketer, will be published quarterly beginning in January 2000.

Other farmers sell directly to the public through roadside stands or farm stands. Products include fruits and vegetables, cut flowers, herbs, maple syrup, honey, Christmas trees, wool, freezer meat and eggs. Some farmers also sell craft items and home-baked goods.

Subscriptions to The Seasonal Marketer will cost $7 per year. To receive a free sample issue, which will be mailed in January 2000, write to The Seasonal Marketer, 76 Applewood Dr., Meriden CT 06450-7900, call or fax (203) 440-3092, or e-mail the-red-pen@home.com. Be sure to include your name and complete mailing address, including zip code.



Whether people sell products grown on several acres or in a backyard garden, they will find information in the newsletter that can be applied to their own business.

The number of farmer direct marketers is steadily increasing as farmers seek to retain more of the profit by eliminating the middleman and selling directly to the public. The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) reports that its 1998 National Farmers Market Directory listed 2,746 farmers' markets, up from 2,411 listed in its 1996 directory. Consumers are continuing to shop at farmers' markets for fresh, seasonal, locally grown produce.

In 1995, USDA surveyed farmers at 772 farmers' markets. More than 6,000 farmers said that they sell their products only at farmers' markets.

PLAN YOUR SALES STRATEGY NOW

I believe I've written this before, but just in case you haven't heard it said, you should be planning the sales of your fruit and vegetable crops now, before you've even harvested the first piece of fruit or planted the first vegetable seed.

The markets for tobacco, corn, and soybeans are about as poor as they were last year at this time. The current situations in dairy and pork are poor as well. As with last year, this means more growers will be growing vegetables and fruit on their farms. With so many choices for a buyer, why should they choose your produce over your neighbors?

Max E. Brunk, formerly of Cornell University, wrote the following in an article entitled "What is Marketing?":

"The size and strength of your market is nothing more and nothing less than what you choose to make it. Success in this respect depends on your ability to anticipate the wants of buyers, packers, processors and consumers for both product and services to anticipate your competitors' actions and to play the game within the rules prescribed by government."

The key here is that you make your market. Yes, there will be a certain demand for many of our products such as sweet corn but you need to have the buyer choose your sweet corn. How do you do this? Marketing.

Max Brunk writes further:

"People want and can eat just so much food. When this basic need is met they begin to search for better qualities and more services–marketing services."

Note that one item mentioned here is better qualities. There are many dozen ears of sweet corn sold in the county and I know that there are many levels of quality within those ears.

What are you doing to insure the highest quality possible in your produce? Buyers, whether at a roadside stand, auction or wholesale operation will seek the highest quality possible. Your goal needs to be to provide the highest quality fruits and vegetables that can be produced.

If you are in a situation where you can directly market your produce then you have greater control over prices received.

Brunk noted:

"Marketing and selling are not synonymous. To sell means to get rid of–to transfer ownership. Anybody can do that. On the other hand, to market means to create value–to perform a service for which someone is willing to pay–to perform a service on which a profit can be made."

If you sell at the auction or to a wholesaler you can improve your returns somewhat by having higher quality but you are still going to be subject to the prices of the market. Anyone who has received $2 for his or her tomatoes at the auction in August knows what I mean.

On the other hand, by direct marketing you have more influence over the prices received for your produce. This does not mean that you will not need to be aware of the current market prices, but you can still have a greater return as long as you give your customers a reason to pay these higher prices.

Tree-ripened fruit, vine-ripened tomatoes, heirloom tomatoes, fresh cut flowers or melons fresh from the field are items that you can provide at a level of quality and freshness that the chain stores could only hope to have. And consumers are often willing to pay a reasonable premium for this improved quality.

Max Brunk also mentioned creating services as part of marketing. What are these services? This could include having preparation information or recipes for your produce. Or this could include educating your customers about the unusual types of melons you are growing or the nutritional values of the various fruits and vegetables at your stand.

Another possibility would be to have prepacked and prepriced produce for convenience. The list here is very long and mostly limited by what you will do. Once a customer is in your market there are many factors affecting purchases. The way produce is displayed and located in your market will affect sales.

One suggestion I recently read was to have high-volume products such as sweet corn in more than one location or accessible from two sides so more people can be making selections at a time. Key items in your stand should have a consistent location so customers can find them each week. Also high-volume items should be located at the back of the stand so customers will walk by other items and possibly add them to their purchase. Color is also important in your displays. Break-up greens with reds or yellows. Also be careful with colors in displays of spring bedding plants. Finally always use the appropriate size container for the volume of produce being displayed. The last few green beans in the bottom of a large box look like leftovers and will not sell as well as the same volume of beans that appear to partially fill a smaller box.

Another form of direct marketing that is often overlooked is direct marketing to restaurants. Here you can receive premium prices for high quality produce but you will need to have the specialty items required by the chefs. A long-term relationship will help you anticipate required volumes and types of produce needed throughout the season. A steady supply and consistent quality is critical in this marketing method and you may need to supply many restaurants in order to be profitable. This marketing method is definitely not for everyone but if you can make it work for your operation then it can be an excellent source of income.

But what if direct marketing is not for you? You must then find ways to receive the highest possible prices for your produce. The quality of your fruits and vegetables will be the first determining factor in price. There are growers that always command a premium price at the auctions because their produce has the reputation of being of highest quality. There should be no reason that any other grower could match their quality. If they are growing too many types of vegetables to really produce a high quality product in any one item then perhaps you should reduce your variety and do a better job with fewer items. It will take some time to develop the reputation for high quality but buyers remember where they purchased a quality product and will begin to seek your produce.

Dealing with the wholesale market has advantages and disadvantages as well. You generally deal with fewer people (good if you do not like to deal with many customers) but you will also need larger volumes of produce and almost always have to have a consistent supply. You will again be subject to market pricing but a premium product may again command a slightly higher price. With so many roadside stands and the volume of fruits and vegetables at the auctions I feel that more growers are going to have to start moving produce out of the county by wholesaling in order to receive high enough prices to stay in business. Look at what overproduction has done to milk prices. I hope the high production potential of Lancaster County does not do the same to fruit and vegetable prices locally.

Making a decent living by producing fruits and vegetables is becoming more of a challenge every day. Like with most other businesses there are many competitors out there trying for the same dollars as you are. I feel that there are still opportunities for the grower who takes the time to grow the highest quality fruits and vegetables and then takes some time to market them as well. Take the time now to do some planning in order to be successful this growing season.

Here's The Dirt On Improving Your Soil With Organic Material

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)–Soil types range from clays as impenetrable as concrete to loams richer than Donald Trump, but a gardening expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences said all soils can be improved by mixing in organic matter.

"Organic matter, also known as humus, is what's left after plant and animal matter has died and decayed," said Robert Nuss, professor of ornamental horticulture. "Mixing humus into a garden or flower bed gives the soil a spongy quality."

Adding humus also:

- Increases the soil's ability to hold water.
- Creates pores in the soil to let in air.
- Prevents clay particles from forming into a solid mass, making root growth easier.
- Helps control soil temperature.
- Provides a better environment for the growth of microorganisms that can help enrich the soil.
- Releases small amounts of nitrogen and other nutrients through continued decay.

Nuss said gardeners should regularly apply humus and fertilizers to garden soils that are planted every year. "Organic matter rarely will give you adequate plant nutrients," Nuss said. "Most materials are low in phosphorus, and the process of decay can temporarily lower the amount of available nitrogen in the soil."

Nuss said gardeners can use any type of organic matter, although some types might be better suited for specific situations.

Cover Crops

Also called "green manure," cover crops are grown to be plowed under in vegetable gardens. Annual rye, annual ryegrass, and spring oats are commonly used as fall cover crops. Gardeners should seed after the final fall cultivation.

"The thick growth will smother weeds," Nuss said. "However, don't use cover crops in flower or landscape beds because you would damage root systems if you tried to incorporate the growth into the soil."

Nuss recommends seeding about four ounces of annual ryegrass or spring oats, or eight ounces of annual rye per 100 square feet of garden. In Pennsylvania, seeding should be done by Sept. 15, although rye can be planted later. "Do not seed a cover crop after Oct. 1," Nuss says. "In the spring, turn it under before its growth is knee-high."

Manures

Dried animal manure supplies nutrients to plants and microorganisms and helps aerate soils. Any garden supply store will stock various manure types with application rates posted on the bag.

Nuss said fresh cattle manure should be applied in fall or winter. "Use 50 to 100 pounds per 100 square feet and add a phosphorus fertilizer and lime to better balance nutrients," he said. "Work the manure in right after spreading, which helps decompose the manure and lessens odors."

Nuss cautions that fresh poultry and sheep manure can damage roots if used excessively. Mix 1 pound of triple or concentrated superphosphate with 10 pounds of manure and apply at a rate of 10 pounds per 100 square feet of garden.

Sawdust

"Sawdust can be used as a mulch or it can be tilled into the soil," Nuss said. "If the sawdust is not decomposed, it should be composted or used as mulch."

Three or four bushels of decomposed sawdust should be applied and tilled into every 100 square feet of soil. Sawdust can raise acidity levels, so Nuss recommends mixing 12 ounces of ground limestone into each bushel of sawdust.

Using fresh sawdust can cause nitrogen deficiencies because microorganisms use nitrogen in soils to decompose the sawdust. "No matter how sawdust is used, you should apply some nitrogen to the soil," Nuss said.

Peat Moss

Peat moss is generally acidic and can be used for soils where acid-tolerant crops are grown. Peat moss decays slowly and holds more water than other organic materials. The slower decay rate of peat moss also eliminates the need to add fertilizer during application. "Observe the plants as they grow to make sure no nutritional problems develop," Nuss said.

"Peat moss is best for landscape plantings because it is effective in soil for a long time," Nuss said. "It is more expensive than other amendments, so it is typically used only in smaller areas."

Peat applications should be 3 to 4 bushels per every 100 square feet.

Composts

Compost can be spread and incorporated like animal manure. Use 50 to 100 pounds per each 100 square feet in landscape plantings. In gardens, compost can be used as mulch and tilled under before the next growing season.

"Spent mushroom compost is a great source of organic matter," Nuss said. "Aged mushroom compost is much better because fresh material is very high in salts, which can injure young plants."

Mushroom compost is usually high in phosphorus and low in nitrogen, so gardeners may have to add some nitrogen fertilizer. Nuss recommends incorporating a 2- to 4-inch layer into the soil before planting.

Even In Frigid Weather, Lettuce Harvest Crisp

ITHACA, N.Y. — Imagine that it's a frigid 15 degrees Fahrenheit outside. Salt trucks are out on the roads and children are building snowmen.

It's a perfect day to harvest lettuce.

Thanks to Controlled-Environment Agriculture, a Cornell University-developed pilot project, hydroponic greenhouses in the winter-bound Northeast might soon be able to compete lettuce head to lettuce head with growers in California and other warmer climes.

From seedling to salad, it takes 35 days to grow one head of hydroponic lettuce. While the average Boston lettuce grower in California might harvest three crops from the ground during the year, the controlled-environment greenhouse produces an average of 16 full crops annually per square foot.

If a standard California grower can harvest 45 tons of the crop per acre per year, the pilot greenhouse outside Ithaca can harvest 390 tons an acre per year.

In other words, an upstate New York, controlled-environment greenhouse can grow on one acre what takes six or seven acres of soil in California, said Robert Langhans, Cornell professor of floriculture and ornamental horticulture and director of Cornell's controlled-environment program. And in New York the growth and harvest are continuous, he said.

"There are few things in agriculture that have the potential as this," said Langhans. "If this project works, it's going to be spectacular."

The 9,000-square-foot pilot facility, located on Rt. 13 and Pinckney Road in Dryden, N.Y., cost about $500,000 to build. Ground for the facility was broken in 1997, and it produced its first harvest last May. New York State Energy Research and Development Authority, along with New York State Electric and Gas, Niagara Mohawk and Agway Country Products Group, Syracuse, N.Y., helped fund the project.

The unusual building is largely made of glass to cover a ground-level pond, which is filled with nutrient-rich water for hydroponic growing. Even in the throes of a fierce upstate winter, the plants bask in warmth. And because the environment is controlled, the greenhouse never has to use pesticides or herbicides.

The lettuce seeds are planted on small trays and germinate in enclosed growing rooms for the first 10 days. On day 11, the tiny lettuce plants are placed on Styrofoam growing flats in a greenhouse pond for 10 days. The plants then are respaced on flats to grow for two weeks in larger hydroponic ponds.

Every day, 1,000 heads of Boston lettuce are harvested and trucked to the Wegman's grocery chain in Rochester, N.Y., and to other outlets in the Northeast. The Cornell researchers hope the plant pilot will help lead New York into growing other products such as spinach, Swiss chard, bok choy, tomatoes and peppers in similar controlled-environment, hydroponic greenhouses. Agway hopes to market the concept commercially to the state's growers and assist them in marketing the produce nationwide.

"New York's shorter growing season places our agricultural industry at a disadvantage with many other states," said F. William Valentino, president of the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority. "As a result, we import about $1 billion of fresh vegetables every year. Controlled-environment agriculture offers the potential to create a new type of farming industry that keeps New York's farms producing year-round."

The authority's role in this program has focused on gaining energy efficiency to minimize energy costs as well as to maximize grower profits, because of the energy-intensive lighting and pumping required in hydroponic technology.

Louis Albright, Cornell professor of agricultural and biological engineering and co-director of Cornell's controlled-environment program, designed the greenhouse's computerized lighting system. In typical greenhouses, growing lights are turned on manually at night or on cloudy days.

"As far as natural light is concerned, it's up and down, up and down for the plants," said Albright.

By comparison, Albright's lighting provides consistent light to the plants in winter and offers shade in the summer. The program monitors the amount of sunlight during the day, activating greenhouse lights as much as possible during off-peak periods, thus reducing electricity costs and reducing the load on utilities.

Direct-Market Farming is Booming

WASHINGTON, D.C.–New figures from the USDAs Ag Census show that sales of direct marketed farm products increased 36 percent from 1992 to 1997. The number of direct market farms increased eight percent during the same time.

ELIMINATE WASTE IN YOUR FEED BUNKS!

When utilizing less-than-perfect feeds stuffs, conventional feed wagons allow your cattle to pick and choose what they like, leaving undesirable feed in your bunks. A Vertical TMR Cutter/Mixer/Feeder from New Direction Equipment will cut your bales of hay or silage into a True Total Mixed Ration, FRESH each day, providing a fluffy, easily digestible ration. It eliminates the waste and also eliminates the need for a tub grinder!

NEW FOR 2000
GEHL. Series III Skid Loaders

Gehl's two largest skid loaders, the Models 5635 and 6635 have been improved to deliver even better performance and smoother operation Standard SAE operating capacities have been increased to 1,900 and 2,350 pounds Optional weight kits raise capacities to 2,200 and 2,650 pounds

Higher hydraulic pressures result in better attachment performance and increased breakout force Standard auxiliary hydraulic flow has increased 15% to 23 gpm while the optional high-flow auxiliary hydraulic system is up 9% to 36 gpm. These improved system hydraulics mean faster cycle times, by as much as 15% over previous models

A host of new convenience and serviceability features have also been incorporated into the Series III skid loader units
